Oklahoma City Budget To Cause Tight Pinch

By Martin Sook

There was good news and bad news for the city's financial health this Friday.

The bad news was that the city's budget for the coming year has a single '3 percent' hook. The worst news was that City Council members were sent their first installment of the family budget, which promises to be a tight budget that will pinch all participants.

Rebecca, the city's municipal economist, has prepared Oklahoma City's budget for the upcoming fiscal year. The budget is expected to征收 a 0.3% tax increase per year for the next three years. This increase is expected to generate $12 million in additional revenue, which will be used to fund various city programs and services.

The city's budget is expected to face some challenges this year, particularly in the area of public safety. The city's police and fire departments have requested more funding to cover increased salaries and benefits for their employees. The city has also been facing budget cuts in recent years, which has led to a reduction in services and a decrease in the overall quality of life for city residents.

Despite these challenges, the city's budget is expected to remain stable this year. The city's financial team has been working hard to ensure that the budget is balanced and that all city programs and services are funded.

Early next week, the city's budget will be presented to the city council for approval. If approved, the budget will go into effect on July 1, 2023.

Brutality Check Asked

The state’s two leading unions have joined forces to demand that the governor order an investigation of the allegations that members of the Oklahoma City police department are using brutal tactics against suspects.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) and the Oklahoma Police Officers Association (OPOA) are demanding that the governor appoint a special prosecutor to investigate the charges.

The AFSCME and OPOA have been critical of the police department’s use of force in recent months, and the groups say they want to see an independent investigation to determine whether the allegations are true.

The governor, who is under intense pressure to respond to the allegations, has not yet made a decision on whether to appoint a special prosecutor.

OC Budget To Be Tight

The city’s budget for the fiscal year ending June 30 will be tight, city officials said Friday.

Mayor Jerry H. Miller said the city will have to make deep cuts in its spending to balance its budget.

"We have to make some tough decisions," the mayor said. "We can’t afford to waste a dime."
Pentagon Report Pushes For European Withdrawal

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The popular notion that the Pentagon is pushing for a European withdrawal of U.S. troops to European bases is false. The Pentagon is not interested in European bases for its own purposes, and it is not interested in any action that would result in a European withdrawal of U.S. troops.

The Pentagon has been promoting a European withdrawal for some time, but it has been doing so to appeal to a European public that is concerned about the cost of maintaining U.S. troops in Europe. The Pentagon has also been promoting a European withdrawal to appeal to a European public that is concerned about the security of European bases.

Europeans' Reaction Astonishment, Anger

By Barry Zaret

By the time of America's entry into the war, the League of Nations had been in existence for over twelve years. The organization was established after World War I to prevent future wars and promote international cooperation. However, its effectiveness was questioned, and it was eventually replaced by the United Nations after World War II.

The pro-Allied Europeans were pleased at the signal victory of the United States. They were not, however, overjoyed at the announcement that America's entry into the war would be American. The action was not anticipated by the Allies, who had been preparing for a long war.

A spokesman for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said the alliance also had not been informed of the decision. America's entry into the war will change the balance of power in Europe, and the Allies will have to adjust their plans accordingly.

Analysis

A policy only one day old, Okada said: "I utterly fail to understand the statement. A correspondence from the Dutch government said consistently that the American action in Iran created a new situation prior to the Common Market summit meeting this Monday.

Yesterday, the Italian foreign minister said: "We have understood the emergency, the special situation in Iran and the necessity of action in Iran.

Only last Tuesday, despite its encouraging, the EEC foreign ministers agreed to not the sanctions against Iran. The sanctions were not expected to have a significant impact.

The action, which Europeans felt must real economic sanctions for Iran, was meant to head off an expected Iranian move to reassert its influence in the region. The EEC foreign ministers were unable to impose a joint economic blockade immediately because this required formal approval in several national capitals. The EEC's lack of action on Monday will encourage Iran to reassert its influence in the region.

A sign of which way the EEC will go may emerge in a meeting of the new heads of state and government in Luxembourg on Monday.

The European response to America's entry into the war was mixed. Some countries, such as France, were quick to express support, while others, such as Italy, were more cautious. The United States' action was seen as a significant shift in the balance of power in Europe.

Rescue Try Big Failure

By Gerald Nadler

The United States has sent a team of special forces to rescue the hostages in Teheran.

The operation was a failure, and the administration is now considering options for future rescue missions.

Commentary

Train engineer described the rescue attempt as a "decisive" move by the United States. He said that the rescue mission was a "vital" step in the battle against terrorism.

The attempt to rescue the hostages was seen as a significant development in the ongoing conflict with Iran. The United States was determined to show its resolve and to prevent further terrorist attacks.

The operation was carried out by a team of specially trained soldiers who were able to overcome the challenges posed by the Iranian government. The team was able to reach the hostages in Teheran, but the rescue attempt was unsuccessful.

The United States has been working closely with its allies in Europe to develop a coordinated response to the crisis. The United States' action was seen as a significant shift in the balance of power in Europe.
