Teenage Pregnancies: Sad, Not Ludicrous

Dr. David Zirul

"But I was still young. But I was a teenager. But I was a teenager."

Dr. David Zirul has heard a lot of misconceptions that would be downright laughable, were it not for the problems their perpetrators were left to bear. It's just they're not talking about when you're in a 20-year-old woman, but that's just not the case.

A non-profit and social activist group, Teribe Allen, has been working to combat teenage pregnancy through education and outreach. The group has been providing resources and support to young mothers and their families, helping them navigate the challenges of parenthood.

The proposition, which is supported by the Oklahoma Medical Association, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and the National Campaign to Prevent Teen and Unplanned Pregnancy, is designed to give young people the tools they need to make informed decisions about their bodies and their futures.

The combination of high-quality education, support, and resources can make a significant difference in the lives of young people. It's time to put an end to the stigma of teenage pregnancy and support those who are working to overcome it.

Bush Rise Phenomena, But It's Too Late

By R. Clay

Washington (AP) - It may be too late, but Bush aides and his party are still pressing the nation's radio and television stations to play an ad they believe could turn the tide in the 1988 presidential race.

The ad, which has been called an "emergency message," features the voice of President Bush and the words, "I'm running in the White House and I'm going to make you a promise." The ad is being broadcast nationwide and is focused on the upcoming primaries.

News broadcasts say Bush's team is scrambling to put together a winning message after last week's poor showing in the New Hampshire primary. The ad, which was released last week, includes a message from the president about the state of the country and his plans for the future.

The ad has been criticized by some political analysts who say it is "out of touch" with the concerns of the American people. Others say the ad is an opportunity for Bush to reassert his authority and make a clear case for his re-election.

The next primary will be in South Carolina, and Bush aides are hoping the ad will help them win there.

Handguns: Easy Killers?

By Tim Green

New York (Reuters) - The U.S. Senate has passed a bill that would ban all handguns for sale in the United States. The bill, which was introduced by Senator Ted Kennedy (D-Massachusetts) and co-sponsored by Senator Joseph Biden (D-Delaware), would make it illegal to sell or possess any handgun in the country.

The bill would also require all gun dealers to conduct background checks on all buyers and to report any sales to the federal government. The bill would also ban all semi-automatic rifles and shotguns.

The bill passed the Senate by a vote of 86-12, with all but two Republicans voting against it. The bill now goes to the House of Representatives, where it is expected to pass.

The bill is supported by many law enforcement officials who say it is needed to help curb gun violence.

The bill has been criticized by some gun rights advocates who say it is an infringement on their Second Amendment rights. The bill also faces opposition from many Republicans who say it is a "big government" solution.
