Funnnels Whirl
Over City Area

By United Press International At least six funnels were reported swirling in the Oklahoma City area early in the evening Thursday, and six as large as 30 miles across. A funnel was reported near southwest Oklahoma City late afternoon.

An Oklahoma City weather station showed four pictures of a funnel, but it dropped from the clouds in far northwest Oklahoma County about 9 a.m. and made its last appearance near the county line.

Three counties of southwest Oklahoma counties were placed under severe funnell warning from 7 p.m. until 11 p.m.

In addition to the areas that received large hail, the heavy rain fell in several areas, particularly near the northwest edge of the city.

Shelters and a few tent

families were forced to evacuate throughout the state because of the heavy rain and possible downpour

Right Thursday afternoon rain fell all the way from Enid just east the Federal Reserve in downtown Oklahoma City.

"Friday's" maximums are forecast to vary from the lower to the upper 80s.

Keep The Boycott

The ending of the U.S. boycott of South Africa could result in the world losing a significant market and the apartheid government retaining political influence. The boycott was initially implemented to protest against the policies of the apartheid regime, which enforced racial segregation and discrimination. Many countries, including the United States, imposed economic sanctions to pressure South Africa to end its apartheid policies. The decision to lift the boycott is a complex issue, involving considerations of economic interests, human rights, and international relations. It is important for countries to reassess the impact of the boycott and determine whether it has achieved its goals. The lifting of the boycott must be accompanied by continued pressure to ensure that South Africa implements reforms and respects human rights.

Unwanted Intrusion

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am a high school student who is deeply concerned about the level of intrusion into our privacy. The recent developments have raised serious questions about the balance between security and personal freedom. The government has implemented surveillance measures that have sparked a debate about the extent to which our privacy should be infringed upon. It is crucial that we as a society find a way to protect our rights while ensuring the safety of our communities.

Asking Questions Right Of Patient

We are constantly striving to improve the quality of care for our patients. One way to achieve this is by asking the right questions during medical consultations. It is important to understand the patient's perspective and their concerns. By doing so, we can provide more personalized and effective care. Our goal is to ensure that our patients feel heard and respected, which in turn helps in building trust and rapport.

Jimmy Will Pay For Fund Cuts

The world was shocked when President Jimmy Carter announced a $2.3 billion cut in foreign aid funds. This decision has significant implications for many countries that rely on these funds for development projects. The cuts will affect various programs, including education, health care, and economic growth initiatives. It is crucial for the administration to reassess the decision and consider alternative strategies to support international cooperation and mutual benefits.

‘Atomic Soldier’ Fights Battle With Bureaucracy

Washington — Harry Bingham, Jr., who has been with the Atomic Energy Commission for 20 years, is fighting his third battle with the bureaucracy. At the age of 73, Bingham is now battling the Department of Justice. He was prohibited by the Atomic Energy Act from talking to reporters about his past efforts to prevent nuclear spills. Bingham, a former deputy director of the Department of Energy’s Idaho Operations Office, said he was, "in no way involved with the Idaho operations. I was just a little guy in the back."

Great choreographic minds thinking alike

By Glenn Carter

Choreographer Martha Graham, the great dancer of contemporary dance, and Paul Taylor, the young but established choreographer, are two of the most influential artists in the field of dance today. Their work has revolutionized the dance world, and they have been responsible for bringing new life to the art of dance.

Graham, whose work is known for its emotional depth and technical virtuosity, has been a driving force in the field of modern dance since the 1920s. Her innovative approach to movement and her emphasis on the inner life of the dancer have had a profound impact on the world of dance. Taylor, on the other hand, has been hailed as a pioneer in the field of contemporary dance, and his work is characterized by its technical precision and emotional intensity.

Despite their differences in style, Graham and Taylor share a deep commitment to the art of dance. Both have been instrumental in pushing the boundaries of what is possible in the field, and their work has inspired generations of dancers and choreographers.

In recent years, there has been a growing interest in the works of both Graham and Taylor. Many companies and choreographers have been exploring the possibilities of their styles, and there is a renewed interest in the work of these two great artists.

On a personal note, I had the opportunity to see both Graham and Taylor in performance recently, and I was struck by the power and emotion of their work. Their work is a testament to the enduring power of great choreography, and I am grateful to have been able to witness it.
