Muskie Sworn In

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Edmund Muskie, an immigrant's son who became a governor of Maine and later a senator, was sworn in Thursday as the 58th Secretary of State in a glittering ceremony in the East Room of the White House.

Newly sworn in was presidential candidate Muskie standing by, Muskie, 48, was seated at the left by Vice President Hubert Humphrey. His wife, June, and their two sons, Frank and Cathy, a Maine judge who presided over their father to the Senate in 1974, stood nearby.

After taking the oath of office before Chief Justice Warren Burger, Muskie, a Democrat, said he would give the Cabinet the utmost respect and consideration.

Muskie described Muskie on the Cabinet, saying he would not allow any political interference in the Cabinet's work.

"I am a Cabinet member," Muskie said. "I am not a political appointee. I am a member of the Cabinet. I will not allow any political interference in the Cabinet's work." To try to adjust with minimum prospects of violence... Muskie was sworn in.

Pass The Mustard, Please

TULSA (UPI) — At least some of the thousands of Cuban refugees to be flown out of Havana, Cuba, will be relocated in Tulsa, Baptist church officials said Thursday.

Rev. Hager, former head of the Oklahoma Baptist Convention's Cuban refugee project, told the Tulsa World the refugees will be given a warm welcome.

"We are helping the refugees," Hager said. "They are not refugees. They are our brothers and sisters." Hager said the refugees will be housed in the city's Brown Memorial Church. The church has already started an emergency shelter for the refugees.

"We have helped other refugees before," Hager said. "This is just another opportunity to share our Lord and Savior with these people." Hager said the refugees will be given transportation to Tulsa.

Landing, Mich. (UPI) — The American Medical Association voted Wednesday to withdraw from the executive committee of the National Academy of Sciences in protest of its policies on the Armenian question.

At the meeting, a resolution was adopted that the AMA should cease to function in the executive committee of the academy, effective immediately.

In a statement released, the AMA said, "We believe that the AMA has a moral obligation to withdraw from the executive committee of the National Academy of Sciences because of its policies on the Armenian question."

"We also believe that the AMA should have a voice in the selection of members of the executive committee."

Nixon Says President Boo-Boo

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Nixon said Thursday that he would not be surprised if the United States and several other nations did not reach an agreement to end the Vietnam War.

"I don't think the United States is ready to make a major commitment to peace," Nixon said. "We are prepared to talk, but we are not prepared to make a major commitment to peace."

"I think that the United States and several other nations should continue to discuss the possibility of a peace agreement," Nixon said. "But we should not make a major commitment to peace."

Being Robbed By Your Servants

Carter is trying to reorient the外交 budget and presidential diplomacy away from the superpower-oriented policy of prior administrations. The problem is that if the Congress passes these cuts, it will mean less money for diplomacy and less power for Carter's presidency.

Paul Harvey

Words A Mother Loves To Hear

"We have seen our children grow up and become adults, and now they are children again," Carter said. "They are young adults who are looking for a world that is safe and secure." He went on to say that he hoped the new administration would work hard to make sure that their dreams became a reality.

Sandy Left Desk, Took To The Field

By DON KELLER

New York - Sunset Boulevard, one of the last of the great movie palaces, was the site of a gala celebration last week. In the ornate lobby, a red carpet was rolled out for the stars of the film, "The Long Riders," which opened nationwide on Friday. The event was a black-tie affair, with the stars arriving in limousines and posing for photos on the steps of the theater. The premiere was a huge success, with the film earning glowing reviews and breaking box office records. The Long Riders, starring Ralph Macchio, Emilio Estevez, and Matt Dillon, is based on the true story of the 1876 New York Rangers, a volunteer cavalry unit that fought in the American Civil War. The film has received critical acclaim for its historical accuracy and powerful performances, and is expected to be a major box office hit.

Zsa Zsa bets a million on her face

Zsa Zsa Gabor lost enough weight so that it doesn't show. "I never cry, I never wince, I never forget to apply my makeup," she says. "This is why I've been on the Hollywood scene for years - I know how to make a face." Gabor, who is known for her glamorous style and stunning appearance, has always been a showstopper. She has starred in numerous films and television shows, and has been a frequent fixture on the red carpet. Despite her age, she continues to be a fashion icon, and is still very much in demand. "I've always been careful about what I eat," she says. "I never eat too much, and I always exercise. This is why I look so good."

Russell Returns To Films

Harold Russell

Russell, a best-selling author, returns to the spotlight with his latest novel, "The Long Road Home," which is set during World War II. The story follows a group of soldiers as they battle through the harsh and unforgiving conditions of the Pacific Theater. Russell, who spent several years as a war correspondent, has a deep understanding of the military and its impact on society. "I wanted to write a book that would capture the mood of the times," he says. "I wanted to capture the emotions of the soldiers, and the struggles they faced." The novel is a powerful and moving reminder of the sacrifices made by those who served in the war, and is sure to be a hit with readers of all ages.

STAFF PICTURES

Pete Townshend

The album "Who's Next" which is out in the stores, sold almost as fast as "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" and "Tommy" did. The group is considered one of the top groups in the current music scene."Who's Next" has sold over 2 million copies in the US, making it the group's first Platinum record. Townshend has written and produced the album, which features a diverse range of songs and styles. The album was recorded in London and New York City, and includes contributions from members of the band and other musicians. The album has received critical acclaim, and is considered a landmark release in the band's career. Townshend's performance on the album is praised, and he is seen as one of the best examples of a new generation of musicians who are pushing the boundaries of rock and roll. The album's success is attributed to Townshend's talent as a songwriter, producer, and performer, and to the band's ability to fuse different musical styles and create something new and exciting. Overall, "Who's Next" is a testament to Townshend's creativity and the band's musical prowess, and it is a must-listen for fans of rock and roll and music history.
Nothing dreary about Pil's appetites

By Karl Leiser

"I don't know what's more exciting than being a football player," said Pil Leiser, a star quarterback on the University of Oklahoma football team. "The attention, the autographs, the interviews. It's like being a rock star!"

But Leiser's excitement goes beyond football. He's also known for his appetite, which is as impressive as his athletic ability. "I eat like a horse," Leiser joked. "But I guess that's part of being a football player. We need the energy to play the game."

Leiser's diet is a mix of proteins, carbohydrates, and fats, designed to provide the energy and nutrients needed for his athletic performance. "I eat a lot of protein, especially after a game," Leiser said. "That's when my body needs it most. I also try to eat plenty of vegetables and fruits to stay healthy."

Leiser's appetite is not just for food, though. He's also known for his appetite for life. "I love to travel and experience new things," Leiser said. "I've been to over 20 countries and I've had the opportunity to eat some amazing foods."

But despite his love for food, Leiser remains focused on his football career. "I want to make sure I'm in top form for the next game," he said. "My appetite for football is as strong as my appetite for food."

Leiser's dedication to his football career is one of the reasons why people love him. His fans are loyal and passionate, and they often come together to support him. "I couldn't do it without my fans," Leiser said. "They're the ones who keep me going."

Leiser's appetite for football and his appetite for life make him a unique and exciting figure. "I'm always looking for new challenges," he said. "Whether it's on the field or off the field, I'm always trying to push myself to be the best."

Leiser's appetite for football and his appetite for life make him a role model for young people everywhere. "I want to inspire others to follow their dreams," he said. "To never give up, no matter what obstacles come your way."

Leiser's appetite for football and his appetite for life make him a shining example of what it means to be a football player. "I've learned so much from my football career," he said. "I've learned how to be a team player, how to stay focused, and how to never give up."

Leiser's appetite for football and his appetite for life make him a true champion. "I'm not just a football player," he said. "I'm a champion. And I'm hungry to be the best I can be."
Occupied France: war-torn childhood

By Carol Frankel

As the summer of 1944 approached, it became clear that the liberation of France was imminent. The citizens of the occupied nation were bracing for the imminent end of four years of suppressing Nazi rule. In this time of uncertainty, children and families were left to confront the harsh realities of war. My mother, Olga Carlucci, shared her memories of this tumultuous time in France, providing a vivid account of childhood in a war-torn nation.

Olga Carlucci's "In Order to Live" is an extraordinary moving memoir.

Danzig: 'How could such a thing happen?'

By Thomas Merton

NEW YORK (AP) - "How could such a thing happen?" was echoed by demonstrators in New York City on Friday, June 26, as they gathered to protest the death of a student in a school in Danzig. The 17-year-old boy,降至ased in a coma by police in a clash outside a university, had died the day before. The protest was one of many across the country as people demanded justice and an end to violence in the city.

The student, named Adam, was among 10 people arrested in clashes outside the University of Danzig. He was taken to a hospital with severe head injuries and later died. The police, who said they were responding to violence, were accused of using excessive force.

The incident sparked a wave of protests, with demonstrators demanding an investigation into the police actions. The mayor of Danzig, Laszlo Haraszti, called for a dialogue with the protesters to find a peaceful resolution.
