PHYLLOS FOUND ALIVE

By Berry Kelly
Staff Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY — After spending two nights outdoors with her parents, 8-year-old Phyllis Diane Smith was found by a police officer who was looking for a missing little girl from the near Lake Stanley Draper. The frightened youngster was discovered by Patrolman W. H. Adams, who drove through the area in his police car and found a little girl sitting on the sidewalk. He took her to a lake ranger's station, where she was reunited with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Conner, before she was taken to University Hospital for treatment.

Phyllis disappeared from her home at 300 N. 8th St. on January 19, and was last seen on January 20. Patrolman Adams was on duty in the area on Sunday evening when he noticed the little girl sitting on the sidewalk. She was crying and said she had been lost. Patrolman Adams took her to the ranger station, where she was reunited with her parents.

The search for Phyllis had been ongoing since her disappearance. Police had searched the area extensively, but had been unable to locate her. The discovery of Phyllis was a relief to her parents and the community. "We are so happy to have our daughter back," said Mr. Conner. "We have been searching for her for days and have been very worried. We want to thank everyone who helped in the search."

Iranian Militant Jokes

Chuck Davis

Iranian militant jokers, are they? I have never heard of someone called a joker in the Middle East. They are called militants because they are who they are. They are not comedians.

Executive Secrecy

And for another important area of concern: Executive secrecy. Frankly, I think that the government should be open about its actions and decisions. The people have a right to know what is going on. If the government is not transparent, it is difficult for the public to trust it. It is important for the government to be accountable and to be in the hands of the people.

Pre-Dawn Love

Second Thought on Broadway

A month or so ago, I saw a show on Broadway. It was a romantic comedy, and I was not too impressed. However, upon further reflection, I have come to appreciate it more. It is a light-hearted and entertaining show. I recommend it to others.
