Liquor Hypocrisy

A recent exposé in one of the nation's leading newspapers has shed light on the hypocrisy surrounding the sale of liquor in certain states. The article reveals that while some states have strict regulations on the sale of alcohol, others have lax enforcement, leading to a significant amount of illegal liquor being sold. This hypocrisy is further compounded by the fact that in some states, the revenue generated from liquor sales is used to fund programs and services that are supposed to be supported by tax dollars.

Sandy Figures What She Can’t See Won’t Hurt

By Robin Adams

"Are you sure you're going to do this?" I asked my friend Sandy. She had just announced she was going to live with her boyfriend and wanted to know if I approved.

"Of course," she replied. "I think it's a great idea." I had to admit, Sandy was always the kind of person who seemed to be able to see what was going to happen before it happened.

"But what if it doesn't work out?" I asked, realizing she was probably going to have to change her mind and move back home.

"Don't worry," she said. "I have a feeling everything will work out fine." And she's always seemed to have that kind of confidence.

"But what if you're wrong?"

"I'm not going to be wrong," she said. "I always seem to know what's going to happen."

"I just don't want you to get hurt," I said.

"Get hurt?" she asked. "I can't see the hurt, so I can't get hurt." And that's when I realized she was right. She was always able to see what was going to happen before it happened, and she could see what was going to work or not work, even when others were blind to it.

Now, I'm not sure if Sandy's psychic abilities are real, but I do know that she always seems to know what's going to happen before it happens. And that's why I'm going to live with her boyfriend too. I just hope I'm not the one who's wrong.
Memory Loss Not Always Result Of Senility

Dr. Lamb

The Very First Haircut

Last week, my wife and I visited our local saloon. When we were seated, a young woman behind the bar approached us and said, "Excuse me, would you like to order dinner?"

I replied, "No, I have just come in to enjoy a drink."

She continued, "Oh, you're a young man, you don't need dinner."

I asked, "Did you just say that I was a young man?"

She nodded, "Yes, I did."

I said, "You're mistaken. I am actually a middle-aged man."

She looked confused, "Middle-aged? How do you know?"

I explained, "Well, for one thing, I have a full head of hair."

She replied, "But you're wearing a hat!"

I said, "I wear a hat for fashion, not because I have hair."

She was impressed, "Wow, you're really clever!"

I smiled, "Thank you."

Then I ordered a drink and enjoyed my evening.

Poison Ivy Hard To Kill

By Bob Donovan
Distributed by United Press International

The problems and answers following are issued by the National Poison Data System, Washington, D.C.

Q: How can I stop poison ivy plants in my garden?

A: Poison ivy is a very tough plant to kill, but there are several methods you can try. Snow might kill the poison ivy plants where they are in a garden, but in that case, it will take several applications over a few years. These methods will kill the plants, but be sure to follow the directions on the label carefully.

Q: Why does a plant die and what can I do to save it?

A: A plant dies for various reasons, such as being overwatered, being knocked over, or being diseased. To save a plant, you need to identify the problem and take appropriate actions. For example, if the plant is being overwatered, you need to reduce the amount of water it receives. If the plant is being diseased, you need to treat it with appropriate chemicals.

Q: The leaves on my garden plants are yellow. Why?

A: Yellow leaves on garden plants can be caused by several factors. One common cause is nutrient deficiency, such as a lack of nitrogen. Another common cause is overwatering or underwatering. To solve the problem, you need to identify the cause and take appropriate actions. For example, if the cause is nutrient deficiency, you need to fertilize the plant. If the cause is overwatering or underwatering, you need to adjust the watering schedule.
