WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congress, heading a midnight deadline this week, seemed no closer to reaching an emergency funds package to provide food stamps to needy Americans. President Carter was expected to keep his promised veto to the measure.

Both sides said the negotiations were deadlocked.

The presidential administration and Congress have become embroiled in a bitter dispute over food stamp aid and the National Food Stamp Commission, which Congress is expected to approve later this week.

The House of Representatives, in a move to break the deadlock, has passed a bill that would provide food stamps to low-income families.

The Senate, on the other hand, is divided over the issue of food stamp aid, with some senators opposing any new aid.

The House-passed bill would provide food stamps to about 20 million low-income families, while the Senate-passed bill would provide food stamps to about 15 million families.

The Republican-controlled Senate has been trying to block the House-passed bill, but House Speaker Tip O'Neill has threatened to invoke cloture if the Senate does not pass the bill.

The President Carter administration has been urging Congress to pass the bill, but has been faced with resistance from some members of Congress who believe the bill is not needed.

"We are very concerned about the potential for a government shutdown if Congress does not pass the food stamp bill," Carter said in a statement.

Carter added that he would veto any bill that did not include food stamp aid.

The Senate is expected to vote on the bill this week, and it is unclear whether they will be able to override the President's veto.

The House-passed bill has been supported by a group of Democratic senators, who have been working to get the bill through Congress.

"We are committed to getting this bill passed," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

Mitchell added that he would work with the Senate leadership to get the bill passed as soon as possible.

The Senate-passed bill has been supported by a group of Republican senators, who have been working to get the bill through Congress.

"We are committed to getting this bill passed," said Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell.

McConnell added that he would work with the Senate leadership to get the bill passed as soon as possible.

TURKISH (SOUTH) - Prohibiting a "radical" right-wing political movement, the "National Salvation Movement," from participating in the upcoming presidential elections, Prime Minister Turgut Ozal said yesterday that the move was "a step in the right direction."

Ozal said that the move was a "step in the right direction." However, he added that it would not be sufficient to solve the problem of terrorism.

Ozal said: "We need to do more. We need to do more to prevent the problem of terrorism."

He added: "We need to do more to prevent the problem of terrorism."

The move comes as Turkey faces increasing pressure from the international community to take stronger action against the militants.

Lawsuit Premature?

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI)—A lawsuit against the former Iranian president, Mohammad Khatami, was filed in the United States yesterday, seeking damages for alleged human rights violations.

Khatami, who served as president from 1997 to 2005, has been accused of authoritarian rule and human rights abuses.

The lawsuit was filed by a group of Iranian citizens living in the United States, who claim they were denied basic rights under Khatami's rule.

Summit Blasts U.S.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The leaders of the Group of Seven (G7) countries have issued a joint statement criticizing the United States' decision to withdraw from the Paris climate agreement.

The statement accuses the U.S. of "abandoning the global leadership role in addressing climate change." The G7 leaders also said they will continue to work with other countries to combat climate change.

FBI Agent Cross-Examined

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The FBI agent who arrested a suspected terrorist in the Washington area was cross-examined in court yesterday.

The agent, identified as Special Agent John Williams, was asked about his role in the arrest of the suspect.

Williams said he observed the suspect entering a building and followed him inside.

The suspect was eventually arrested and charged with a weapons violation.

Sooner Joke

There goes the Oklahoma Legislature again. That's the way it goes down there. A man has a right to earn his living and a right to speak his mind, but you can't do both. This time they're making a law that says you can't have a cigarette in public without a permit. I don't know what they're thinking, but I guess it's to keep kids from smoking. I don't smoke, but I reckon I could write a book about what they're doing to the rest of us. After all, it's our right to smoke or not to smoke, isn't it?

Hoping For A Good American Car

When a child takes off the clothes of a parent, it is usually because the child is hungry, says Dr. Benjamin Spock. He recently published a book called "The Doorway to Freedom," which has been criticized by some parents. "If you want to help a child develop a healthy sense of independence, you have to let them make mistakes," Dr. Spock said. "The child has to learn that they can't always have their way." I think that's great advice, but it is also important to remember that parents have a responsibility to provide a safe and nurturing environment for their children. It's a delicate balance, but with patience and understanding, it can be achieved.

Expensive Oil And Free Speech

Many of my young readers have asked me about the current debate over oil prices. I think it's important to remember that the cost of oil is not just a matter of economics, but also a matter of public policy. The government has a responsibility to ensure that oil is produced in a way that is both safe and sustainable. I believe that the best way to ensure this is to support policies that encourage renewable energy sources. This will not only reduce our dependence on oil, but it will also help to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and combat climate change.

A Single Shot of the Miami Beach Hilton can Accommodate 400 Cubans!

Voice Of The People

For a time, I was a correspondent for the Miami News and I covered the Cuban crisis. It was a difficult time, but I think it was important to report the truth. I remember one story that I wrote about the shortage of hospital beds in Miami. It was a sad story, but it helped to raise awareness about the crisis. I think it's important for journalists to remember that their job is to inform and to help people understand the world around them. It's not always easy, but it's important.

Cookware Coming Out Of The Kitchen

As a former journalist, I have been privileged to see many different stories. One that I will never forget was the story of the kitchen. It's a little-known fact that the kitchen is a central hub of the American home. It's where families come together to share meals and create memories. I think it's important to celebrate the kitchen and all the wonderful things that it stands for. After all, it's where we live and where we love. It's where we laugh and where we cry. It's where we grow and where we learn. And it's where we create a sense of home. Thank you for listening.

The Philadelphia 76ers may not have had the best of fortunes this season, but they are still one of the most exciting teams in the league. The 76ers are currently 35-23, good for third place in the Eastern Conference. The team is led by superstar guard Allen Iverson, who is averaging 32.6 points per game. Iverson's ability to score from anywhere on the floor is one of the reasons the 76ers are still in contention for a playoff spot.

Genuine Risk Early Choice For 2nd Leg Of Triple Crown

Jockey Risk, the horse many believe will win the second leg of the Triple Crown, is a thoroughbred from the stable of trainer Ron Royce. Risk raced to victory in the Kentucky Derby last week, but trainer Royce is not counting on him to win the Preakness. "Risk is a special horse," Royce said. "He has the talent to win the Preakness, but he also has the temperament. We have to use our heads and not just follow the horse."

Ayatollah a drug addict, says psychic

By Dick Kleiner

NEW YORK - Peter Burkin, the worldwide psychic, recently revealed that he had recently seen the Ayatollah in a dream before the Iranian revolution. He claimed that the Ayatollah was an drug addict in the past and that he had been taken under the influence of drugs.

Burkin says he had lost touch with the Ayatollah after his recent comeback. He claims that the Ayatollah has been asked by the government of Iran to return to power.

Burkin predicts that the end of the hostage situation will be violent. He says that the hostage-takers in the U.S. embassy are not very well informed.

Angel sings the blues

Daisy's pantry Hose allow More leg

By Dick Klone

Angels, the song, has always been a favorite of mine. The melody is lovely, and the lyrics are well written. The story is of a young girl who falls in love with a handsome man, but is rejected by him because she is not wealthy. She takes solace in the fact that she is free to pursue her own happiness. The song ends with the lines: "Angels, I'll take you any place you want to go."
