Carter Views Disaster

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — President Carter took a helicopter tour through the city today to view the devastation caused by the mudslide that struck the small town of Holt, Wash., near Spokane, Wash., today.

"The mudslide covers an area of about 2,000 acres and it's a real tragedy," the president said. "We're doing everything we can to help the people affected by this disaster." Carter flew over the damaged areas, looking for ways to assist the victims.

Baseball Strikes Here

The baseball strike continues to worry fans and players alike. The National League and the American League have failed to reach a settlement on the key issues of salaries and revenue sharing. The strike has already cost the league millions of dollars.

OSU Wins in Softball

The Oregon State University softball team defeated the University of Washington 3-2 in extra innings today. The win moves the Beavers to 14-5 on the season.

City Flyers Stay Alive in NHL

The Philadelphia Flyers, despite being down 3-1 in the series against the Montreal Canadiens, won Game 4 last night to even the series at 2-2. The Flyers will now have the home-ice advantage in the series.

WATER, TRASH HIRES APPROVED

The city council approved the hiring of a new water and trash management director. The new director, John Smith, has a background in environmental science and will be responsible for overseeing the city's water and trash management programs.

Credit Crunch Eased

The Federal Reserve has eased credit conditions, allowing banks to lend more freely. This move is expected to boost the economy and help businesses that have been struggling due to the pandemic.

Nigh Outlaws Use Of Tear Gas

In a recent incident, a group of Nigh Outlaws used tear gas to disperse a crowd of protesters. The group is under investigation for committing acts of violence.

Libel Ruling Appeal Due

A libel suit filed by a local businessman against a newspaper was recently ruled in favor of the newspaper. The businessman has appealed the decision to a higher court.

Recycle Venetian Blinds

DEAR HELIOISE,

My Venetian blinds are a disaster. I have been struggling with them for years, but they just won't stay closed. I have tried everything from rubber bands to Velcro, but nothing seems to work. I need a solution. Can you help me?

Sincerely,

Artie

DEAR ARTIE,

Venetian blinds can be a real pain, but there is a solution. You can try using a rubber band to keep them closed. Tie the rubber band around the bottom of the blind and then pull it tight. This should help keep the blinds closed. If that doesn't work, you might want to consider replacing the blinds with a more permanent solution.

Wedding Vows Read

Dear Heloise,

I am planning a wedding for my daughter and we are having trouble finding someone to read the vows. We want someone who is not related to either of the families. Do you have any suggestions?

Sincerely,

Mary

DEAR MARY,

It is important to choose someone who is neutral to read the vows. You can try contacting local religious leaders or community leaders to see if they are available. You can also consider hiring a professional wedding officiant. They are trained to perform weddings and can provide a neutral voice for your vows.

As Miami Goes . . .

New events take place in Miami all the time — new restaurants, new hotels, new developments, new faces on the political scene. And in each of these events, the question about the impact on the city's future always arises.

Is this area poised for a new economic boom, or is it just a bubble about to burst? What will happen when the tourists stop coming? Will Miami's economy continue to grow, or will it slip back into the depths of recession?

These are the questions that are on everyone's mind as the latest news from Miami emerges. And with each new development, the answers become clearer.

Right Wing Starting To Get Dirty

President And His Crew Bunglingly Amateurish

Washington — President Carter's administration has been dogged by controversy and scandal ever since it took office in January. The latest incident, the so-called "Whitewater" scandal, has cast a cloud over the president's already troubled presidency.

The scandal involves the president's弟弟 Andrew and a business deal they had with a Arkansas land developer. The deal, which involved the sale of a $10 million tract of land, has raised questions about the president's role and the government's use of its resources.

Despite the president's denials and attempts to spin the story, the scandal continues to grow. The latest developments include the release of thousands of pages of documents that raise even more questions about the president's involvement.

Enter Fritz

With the president's approval, the recent events in Miami have taken on a new dimension of scandal and intrigue. The latest development is the so-called "Fritz" case, which involves a local businessman accused of paying off public officials to get favorable treatment.

Fritz, whose real name is Frank, has been under investigation for months. Authorities have uncovered evidence of payoffs to various city officials, including the mayor and the police chief. The case has the potential to become a major political scandal.

Shelf Life Can Decrease Health Foods' Potential

Several studies have shown that the shelf life of health foods can decrease over time, affecting their nutritional value and overall quality. This can pose a significant challenge for consumers and the food industry.

According to one study, the shelf life of certain health foods, such as nuts and seeds, can decrease by up to 30% over a period of six months. This means that consumers may be consuming less healthy foods than they think.

Thoughts

The impact of these findings on the health food industry is significant. Companies will need to develop new strategies to extend the shelf life of their products and ensure that consumers are getting the most out of their purchases.

‘60 Minutes’ Believes News Doesn’t Need To Be New

The popular news program ‘60 Minutes’ has recently faced criticism for its reliance on old news stories. The program’s producers claim that they are simply re-examining old stories to give them a new perspective.

But many critics argue that the program is simply recycling old material to save on production costs. Others worry that the program is losing its relevance and its impact on the news landscape.

The debate continues as the program’s producers辩 that they are simply providing new insights and perspectives on old stories. Whatever the case, one thing is clear: the news landscape is changing, and ‘60 Minutes’ will need to adapt to stay relevant.

Hackman ends two-year hiatus

By Vance Field

Gene Hackman's career was in decline, so he quit to go to awards shows and the Academy Awards.

The Academy Awards are now Hackman's career. He has been nominated for three Academy Awards, and has won two. He has also been nominated for a Golden Globe Award and a BAFTA Award.

As a result, Hackman has been able to devote more time to his family. He has been married for 20 years, and has four children. He also has a stepson from his first marriage. Hackman's family is very important to him, and he is known for being a dedicated family man.

One of his children, his son, is a film director. Hackman has worked with his son on several films, and has even directed a film himself. Hackman is proud of his son's work, and is often seen at film festivals and premieres with his family.

Hackman is also known for his philanthropy. He has been involved in several charitable organizations, and has even donated money to a local hospital. Hackman is known for his generosity, and is often seen helping others.

Overall, Hackman's career has been successful, and he has been able to enjoy a lot of the things that he loves. He is a family man, and is known for his philanthropy. Hackman is a true example of success and dedication.
There's a little 'Bozo' In us all, says Carny star

By Gene Trichter

Carny (universal) - In the wake of the recent success of the film "The Great Dictator," which depicts the character Charlie Chaplin as a political figure, numerous performers have joined the ranks of the virtual same. Among them is Carny, a performer who has been putting on shows for the past 30 years. Carny's act is a blend of satire and comedy, and he is known for his unique approach to entertaining audiences.

Carny's career began in the 1940s, when he started performing in small venues across the country. Over the years, he has evolved his act, incorporating new elements and improving his craft. His performances are a mix of physical comedy, slapstick, and political satire.

Carny's success has been due in part to his ability to adapt to the changing times. He has been able to remain relevant by incorporating new trends and feedback from audiences into his act.

Carny's current tour is taking him to various locations around the country, where he continues to entertain audiences with his unique brand of comedy. His shows are a must-see for anyone interested in the world of entertainment and comedy.

"A Day in Hollywood, a Night in Hollywood" is a double feature starring Frank Sinatra and Henry Fonda. The film, which opens at the Loew's State Theater on May 12, is a musical comedy that takes place in the during the golden age of Hollywood. The film follows the story of a struggling actor who is given a chance to star in a major film after a chance encounter with a Hollywood producer. Along the way, the actor learns the ropes of the industry and becomes a star. "A Day in Hollywood, a Night in Hollywood" is directed by George Seaton and stars Frank Sinatra, Henry Fonda, and a host of other Hollywood legends. The film is a must-see for anyone who loves classic Hollywood cinema. Don't miss your chance to see this film at the Loew's State Theater. The double feature is a great way to spend an evening at the movies.
By Desmond Ryan
Knight-Ridder Newspapers
At the outset of "The Gong Show Movie," there is a song entitled "Sometimes It Just Don't Pay to Get Up." If your day holds any prospect of an encounter with this awful film, a truer warning was never issued.

There have lately been several attempts, perhaps encouraged by the success of "The Muppet Movie," to reverse a trend and make movies out of TV shows. Sometimes, it works -- as with "Star Trek" -- but more often we are presented with a 90-minute "Get Smart" episode stretched out to the ninety minutes of "The Nude Bomb." The latter is a landmark achievement in film-making when measured against Chuck Barris' "The Gong Show Movie.

It may stretch your credulity to the limit, but there are acts that are too gross to be allowed on "The Gong Show." If you wish to see what they are, then you have a reason for going to see "The Gong Show Movie," not to mention a psychiatrist. That the sight of freaks, crazies and the merely untalented humiliating themselves is so popular testifies to a streak of rank sadism in the television audience.

Watching the movie is an exercise in masochism. Barris directed this shambles and co-authored it with Robert Dowrey, who is now presumably in hiding. He offers something that is partly autobiographical and partly peek behind the scenes at "The Gong Show," a place where no one in his right mind would want to look. Despite it all there is one moment of candid backstage that suggests what a good documentary film-maker might have done with such access. A man loses his temper when Barris walks out of the audition hall and a shouting match ensues.

When you're young and going nowhere... the Carny looks like a good way out.

It's Bluto, Not Brutus, For Popeye

By Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: Please settle a vehement argument between my boss and myself. What is the name of the character who is the big, burly arch rival of Popeye in all of the Popeye cartoons? My boss insists it's Bluto, and I am equally sure it's Brutus. My job could be riding on your answer. CARL ELLIS, Warsaw, Ind.

I think you'll find the unemployment office somewhere in city hall. Bluto is the bully who always gets bopped by Popeye.

DEAR DICK: Please try to find out if Pete Candoli was from New Rochelle, N.Y. He was married to Betty Hutton and is now married to Edie Adams. I think we are related. MRS. T.C.R., LaFayette, Calif.

Better luck next relation. Candoli is a midwesterner and is not from New Rochelle. He and Edie, incidentally, are now separated.

His name is Grady Nutt and, surprisingly, he is a genuine minister, ordained in the Southern Baptist church. He does not have a church of his own, but rather goes around to various churches and organizations, speaking and lecturing.

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me the names of the stars that have been honored by the American Film Institute so far? M. SCARPATI, Trenton, N.J.

They are, chronologically: John Ford, James Cagney, Orson Welles, Betty Davis, William Wyler, Henry Fonda, Alfred Hitchcock and just this past year, James Stewart.

DEAR DICK: I have a bet with my grandma. She says Natalie Wood died of cancer. I say no. Please tell me as soon as you can. NICKIE ROUGH, Tell your grandma to stick to preserving watermelon rinds and stay out of current events. Natalie Wood is in fine health.

DEAR DICK: I heard on the radio that they are making a "Smookey and the Bandit II." Is it true? If so, when will it come to the theaters, and who will be in it? BECKY KLASS, New Buffalo, Mich.

Yes, and it's all finished, as a matter of fact. You'll probably be able to see it next fall. It stars the same people as were in the first one -- Burt Reynolds, Sally Field, Jerry Reed and Jackie Gleason -- with Dom DeLuise added this time.

DEAR DICK: In the early 1960s, a young actress named Suzan Ball died of cancer. I believe her husband's name was Richard Long. Was that the same Richard Long who starred in "The Big Valley" and who also died some time ago? JEAN MORRIS, Battle Ground, Wash.

Yes, the same Long. Suzan Ball died in 1956 after contracting cancer from eating a bell pepper. She was only 22 when she died.

DEAR DICK: Can you tell me if Andy Griffith is the same Andy Griffith who once attended college in Bridgeport, Conn? I knew him then. He lived with a family that had a special kind of shape, OLYER JACOBS, Blackshear, Ga.

Yes, the same Andy. The TV star went to the University of North Carolina and wears ordinary shoes.
