The New York Cosmos' 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Stars Tuesday night at the University of Wyoming's War Memorial Stadium was a sellout, and a sellout success. In fact, the game was the biggest attendance for any Cosmos home game in the history of the team. The previous record was 13,180, set in the third game of the team's inaugural season. The Cosmos defeated the Stars 1-0 at the same venue in their final regular-season game of 1977. The game was also the 100th in the Cosmos' history.

Nature's Grim Reaper Kills 1,000 A Decade

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (1972) – Often credited to "Flinch Gray Dust," a cloud from the sky or a black cloud that killed a thousand people a day, is the deadly Grim Reaper that stalks the highways of the country. It is the noisy, cacophonous, ghoulish Grim Reaper that turns day into night and takes the lives of many, including those of children and women.

The grim reaper is the true stuff of nightmares, the personification of the ancient fear of death that haunts the human mind. It is the specter of the unknown, the fear of what lies ahead.

The grim reaper is the force that drives us to make the most of every moment of our lives. It is the的动力 that pushes us to make the most of every moment of our lives. It is the reason why we work so hard, why we strive so hard.

The grim reaper is the reason why we love, why we care, why we sacrifice. It is the reason why we live.

The grim reaper is the reason why we die.

Killer Tornado Changed Missouri Town Forever

May 24, 1975. It was photographed by a member of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's severe storms laboratory based in Norman.

There were actually being a good time until the tornado, which tore through the town of Greensburg, Kansas, on May 24, 1975. The tornado was a category F5, one of the most destructive tornadoes in the history of the United States.

The tornado, which moved through the town for about five minutes, left a path of destruction that was 1.25 miles wide and 2.3 miles long. The tornado caused widespread damage to homes, businesses, and infrastructure.

The town of Greensburg had a population of about 1,400 people. The tornado caused the death of 16 people and left 200 people injured.

The town was completely destroyed. The tornado had already finished with the high school, which was the only building that remained standing.

The town was later rebuilt. The new town is called "New Greensburg." The town is now considered to be one of the most well-prepared for tornadoes in the United States.
