TULSA MAN: SUICIDE NO WAY OUT

By Don Frazier

OKLAHOMA CITY — "I'm out of ideas of what to do next," said a man as he sat in his car outside the cathedral in Oklahoma City yesterday. "I just can't take it anymore," he said, "I'm just done with this life." The man, identified as John Doe, 32, had been struggling with depression for the past several years. He said he felt like he had no more hope and that he just wanted to end his suffering. "I don't see any way out," he said. "I just want to be free of this pain." The police were called to the scene and took the man into custody. He is currently being held at the city jail pending further investigation.

Unpaid Ticket Fuss Heating Up

By Richard Smith

OKLAHOMA CITY — The ticket went up Friday on a car stuck at the edge of the city, but the driver got off scott free.

"I was never asked if I wanted a ticket," said a man who didn't want to be identified. "I thought I was just going to pay the fine, but then they started asking me questions." He said he was suppose to be at the airport to pick up his wife, but now he's stuck at a parking lot.

"I'm just trying to get to the airport," he said. "I don't want to take a bus, I want to get there as soon as possible." He said he was told he had to pay a $35 fine, but he doesn't have any money.

"They said I had to pay the fine," he said. "I don't have any money, I can't pay the fine." He said he was told he had to go to the courthouse to pay the fine.

"I don't know how to do that," he said. "I don't know how to get there." He said he was told he had to pay the fine before he could get his car back.

Serpent Standoff

Just in time for Father's Day, the city of Oklahoma City was abuzz with excitement as the Serpent Standoff got underway.

"It's like a dance of the serpents," said a woman who was watching the event. "It's so beautiful, I can't believe it." She said she was there for the first time and was amazed by the spectacle.

Lance Charges Asked Dropped

WASHINGTON — The District Department of Public Safety in Washington, D.C., has dropped charges against a Washington, D.C., police officer in a case that caused a furor last year.

"We dropped the case," a police spokesperson said. "It was a minor incident and we felt it was in the best interest of justice to drop the charges." He said the officer had been charged with issuing false citations.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: My last is one which will be appreciated by many in this area. I had the misfortune to be away from home the other day and witnessed the worst kind of robbery. The robber used a large dumbbell for a weapon, and there was no opportunity for anyone to help us.

There is a certain kind of man who, when he is going to rob a house, will use a large stone or a similar object to break the window and then leaves it in the room as an indication that he was there. It is important to know this, as it may help catch the perpetrator in the act of robbery.

Sincerely yours,

Did Administration Cover Up Vesco Probe

WASHINGTON - The Senate Judiciary Committee, in a surprise move, yesterday ordered an investigation into whether the Administration covered up the Senate probe of alleged improprieties by Robert Vesco during his tenure as chairman of the New York Stock Exchange.

The move was prompted by a report in The Washington Post that said high-level Administration officials had been involved in a secret campaign to whitewash the Senate investigation.

The committee's chairman, Robert H. Taft, Jr., (R-Ohio) made the announcement after a closed-door meeting with other members of the committee.

Taft said that the committee had received evidence of a conspiracy to cover up the Senate investigation, and that it was essential to get to the bottom of the matter.

The Senate investigation, which was conducted by the subcommittee on securities and fraud, lasted for several months and resulted in a series of hearings and a report that accused Mr. Vesco of a variety of improprieties.

The committee's announcement came as a shock to many people, who had expected the Administration to play a more passive role in the investigation.

The Administration had denied any involvement in the Senate investigation, but it had been criticized by some members of Congress for its handling of the matter.

The committee's action could have serious implications for the Administration, as it could lead to a full-blown investigation by Congress.

It could also affect the stock market, as the Vesco case has been a source of concern for many investors.

Networks’ Newcasts Mostly Carbon Copies?

By Fredric Ober

New York—The networks are finding it harder to make a splash in the broadcast world. While they once ruled the airwaves with their programs, today’s networks are more like armchair statisticians,每次都 dependant on the ratings to see how they’re doing. The networks’ ratings are down, and they’re scrambling to find ways to get back on top. They’re looking for new ways to attract viewers, such as changing their programming schedules or hiring new talent. In the meantime, the networks are still producing quality programs, but the focus is on the numbers. The networks’ financial health depends on the ratings, so they’re doing everything they can to keep them up. The networks’ goal is to make sure their programs are on the air, and they’re not afraid to make changes to achieve that goal. They’re constantly trying to find new ways to reach viewers, and they’re not afraid to take risks. The networks’ future is uncertain, but they’re not giving up hope. They’re still trying to make their programs as enjoyable and entertaining as possible, and they’re always looking for ways to do better.

Just Call It The Peeping Tom Derby

By Maye Kobes

Hollywood celebrities are always doing something, but they probably haven’t been as busy as they have been since the Super Bowl on Sunday. The film industry was in full swing, with everything from the Peeping Tom Derby to the Academy Awards. And the biggest news of the week was the death of the late actor, Peeping Tom. He was found dead in his Los Angeles home on Monday, just three days after his 70th birthday. His death was ruled a suicide by hanging, and police are still investigating the matter. The Hollywood community was shocked and saddened by the loss of this beloved actor. Many of his friends and colleagues paid tribute to him on social media, and the loss of Peeping Tom was felt around the world. The Peeping Tom Derby, in honor of the actor’s legacy, was held on Sunday, and it was quite a spectacle. The event featured a parade, a race, and a concert, all held in the memory of Peeping Tom. The parade was led by his family and friends, and it was an emotional moment for all who participated. The race was a foot race, and it was won by a young boy who had never run before. The concert was a celebration of Peeping Tom’s life, and it featured many of his colleagues and friends. The event was a huge success, and it brought many people together to remember Peeping Tom and his legacy. The Peeping Tom Derby was the perfect way to honor his memory, and it was a fitting end to a week of mourning.
