Justice Crimped ABSCAM Probe, Author Claims

Jack Anderson

Washington, D.C., Thursday morning that the FBI's investigation of the ABSCAM scandal was seriously crimped, even to the point of a possible shutdown, by the White House's refusal to turn over the ABSCAM files to the Watergate special prosecutor until after the 1976 election. Anderson, a Washington Post columnist, said the Justice Department had been swayed by the White House's threat of a legal showdown in the face of President Ford's refusal to turn over the ABSCAM files, which contain evidence of widespread political corruption.

What You Should Do With Your Money Fund Now

Sylvia Porter

If you're among the millions of Americans who invest in the Money Fund, now is a good time to consider what you're doing. The Money Fund is a mutual fund that invests in short-term U.S. government securities, such as Treasury bills and notes. It's a popular investment choice because it offers a safe, liquid way to grow your money. However, it's important to keep in mind that the Money Fund's returns are not as high as those of other types of investments. If you're looking to grow your money, you may want to consider other options, such as stocks or bonds.

Doomsday Clock Ticking Once Again

Chen Shui-bian

As the Doomsday Clock ticks once again, it's clear that we're living in a world that's far more dangerous than ever before. The threat of nuclear war, terrorism, and climate change looms large, and it's up to all of us to take action to ensure a safer future for our children and grandchildren. We must work together to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels, promote peace and understanding, and build a more equitable society.

Reagan Keeps On Schedule

Michael Kinsley

President Reagan is on track to fulfill his campaign promise to balance the federal budget by 1984. The President's fiscal discipline is paying off, as the budget deficit has shrunk significantly in recent months. However, some critics argue that the President's efforts to reduce government spending are too slow, and that more needs to be done to address the underlying causes of the deficit.

Maestro Herrera Has Time Only For His Music

By Groom Travis,

Established in the mid-1800s, the family's first mission was to provide clothing for the masses. The Herrera family business has evolved over the years, but their commitment to quality remains the same. Maestro Herrera, the current head of the Herrera family, is known for his time management skills.

Maestro Herrera has always prioritized his work over leisure. He has been seen in public with a pocket watch at his side, never more than 30 minutes late for any appointment. Despite his rigorous schedule, he maintains a warm and approachable demeanor.

When asked about his secret to success, Maestro Herrera simply says, "I prioritize my time. I plan my day and stick to it." He has even written a book on time management, which has become a best-seller.

Despite his many responsibilities, Maestro Herrera always finds time for his family. He is an active participant in the lives of his children, who he considers his top priority.

In his free time, Maestro Herrera enjoys playing the piano and listening to classical music. He is a fan of Beethoven and enjoys performing his music for his family and friends.

When asked about his future, Maestro Herrera is optimistic. "I plan to continue my work in the family business and spend more time with my family," he said. "I hope to pass on my knowledge and skills to the next generation."

CFA Finally Moving

When the College Football Association was formed it was originally planned as a national organization of major college coaches. The big schools would constitute the vast majority of the membership, and it was to be an establishment of the 5-A schools. Thus, there would be no possibility of the major schools being forced into a policy that would limit the playing rights of the major schools. They wouldn't be pushed around by a bunch of smaller schools any longer.

Well, that was the idea. The problem is it hasn't worked. Since its inception, the CFA has been

It's a fact that since the CFA was founded, the major coaches have been forced to do things they never thought they would have to do.

I think that is true. The CFA has been forced to do things it never thought it would have to do, and that is not good for the sport.

The CFA has drawn up a list of proposals it's going to file at the NCAA when the January convention rolls around.

One of these is that all coaches may be limited to 625 players on their roster at the beginning of the season.

You do feel the feeling that the NCAA is heading in the right direction. It would be helped quite a bit if the major schools would join the group. There are the only two major conferences that have opposed the CFA.

But it is the CFA schools that have been the most vocal about the proposed reforms. And at the January convention, only 10 to 12 more votes would be needed to make the change in part of the NCAA constitution.

The Big Ten and the Pac-12 were both opposed to the change because of the unlimited number of scholarship athletes a school could care less about football, have been the most vocal in their opposition to the change.

The CFA isn't threatening the NCAA again. All of that was done in the early days of the CFA when it was more powerful.

Keith Wears Crown Well

When Keith Henderson, wherever he was, was supposed to break the NCAA record last year, a lot of people noticed. For one thing, he had the ability to hit the ball at any point on the field. For another, he was supposed to be the people's champion. He was the first in the history of the University of Illinois to hit a home run.

But when Henderson went on to win the NCAA record, he was supposed to be the man of the people. He was supposed to be the guy who was going to change the game of baseball.

That's why I'm so glad to see him do it. He deserves a lot of credit. For one thing, he's a nice guy. He's a great athlete, a great student, and a great person.
