Rift Leaves Cook Without Raise

By Martin Cook

OKLAHOMA CITY — A rift between three members of the City Council and Manager Jim Milam emerged during Tuesday's meeting when two votes to raise Cook's salary failed by one vote. The votes came during a highly publicized and politically charged meeting, with one councilman calling the vote a show of "insurgency" in Cook's administration.

Despite Councilman Bob Hays' claim that the two votes, the necessary council support for a pay raise, failed by one vote, it was more a vote of Cook's unpopularity among council members. In criticizing the city manager's services, one council member noted that the city had budgeted $1 million to the city manager in the last three years, yet the city had experienced budget cuts.

The build-up to the vote involved a critical difference of opinion between the council and Cook regarding the city manager's performance.

The vote was immediately attacked by critics, who said it was a vote of disapproval of Cook's administration.

The councilman who had voted against a raise, Councilman Joe Smith, said, "If you don't like someone, you should vote against them. It's as simple as that." But the councilman who had voted for a raise, Councilman John Brown, said, "I don't think we can afford to lose someone like that. He's a good manager." The vote was made by a simple majority, with one councilman abstaining.

The city council is expected to meet again in the coming weeks to discuss the matter further.

Solar Energy Funds Hiked

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The House, ignoring warnings it might lead to increased funding for solar energy programs, voted Tuesday to increase the amount of money to be spent on such programs by $1 million. The vote was 235-105, with 82 Democrats and 153 Republicans voting for the measure.

The bill, which is expected to pass the Senate, would increase funding for solar energy programs by $1 million. The bill is expected to pass the Senate next month.

The House vote was part of a $4.2 billion appropriation for solar energy programs, which is expected to pass the Senate next month.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, which oversees the solar energy research budget, had recommended a $5 billion increase. The House Appropriations Committee, which oversees the budget, had recommended a $4 billion increase.

OKLAHOMA CITY - A 10-year-old girl who was found unconscious in the garage of her house was pronounced dead at a hospital.

The girl, identified as Sarah Johnson, fell into a car and was later declared dead at a hospital.

Meanwhile, a 12-year-old boy was found dead in a nearby park. Police said the boy had been playing in the park and drowned.

Mitzi Schaffer, the police chief, said the case is under investigation.

She added that the family is being allowed to return to their home.

"It's a very sad day," Schaffer said. "We're just trying to make sure the family is taken care of.

Schaffer said the boy was playing in a pond when he disappeared. Police found his body in the water.

"We're heartsick," she said. "We're doing everything we can to help the family.

"We're still in shock," she added. "We're just doing our best to help the family through this difficult time."

WILLIAM - The unexpected Chinese move to double its nuclear arsenal has raised the specter of a new arms race. This, in turn, has led to increased demand for nuclear weapons worldwide, including in Asia. The Chinese, according to a new report, have doubled their nuclear stockpile from 740 to 1,480 warheads in the past year. In addition, they have increased their production rate, with an estimated 9,000 warheads now being produced annually.

Five Who Dared Cross Public Opinion

By Kyle Goldard

The recent controversy that has engulfed the state of Oklahoma has raised important questions about the role of public opinion in government decision-making. The controversy centers on a bill introduced by State Senator John Smith, which would have allowed the state to enter into a new nuclear arms agreement with China.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The stock market moved sharply higher Thursday on news that President Reagan has come out in favor of a plan to increase the federal debt limit.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had been down all week, rose 16.92 points to close at 826.07. This is the seventh straight day of gains for the Dow, which has climbed 101.25 points since June 7.

Reagan's endorsement of the debt limit increase came after a meeting with Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., and House Majority Leader James Rhodes, R-Ore., who have been pushing for the increase.

The move is seen as a major victory for the administration, which has been seeking to increase the debt limit to cover the cost of the $288 billion budget deficit.

GM Cars Due Recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The General Motors Corporation announced Thursday that it will recall all GM cars due to a safety issue.

The recall affects over 1 million cars, including models such as the Chevrolet Camaro, Pontiac Firebird, and Buick Regal.

The problem is believed to be related to the steering system, which can malfunction under certain conditions.

Chrysler Rescued

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Chrysler Corporation announced Thursday that it has reached an agreement with its creditors to restructure its debt.

The deal will allow Chrysler to emerge from bankruptcy protection.

The company has been struggling financially in recent years, with losses exceeding $2 billion in the last fiscal year.

Foes Cry Out Against Ban On Bank Gifts

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A coalition of consumer groups is calling for a ban on gifts from banks to customers.

The group, which includes the Consumer Federation of America and the Consumer Research Network, is concerned that gifts from banks can create conflicts of interest.

The coalition is pushing for legislation that would prohibit banks from giving gifts to customers as a way to influence their business decisions.

Barry To Remain At Channel 4

By Gene DIXON

NEW YORK - Barry, the young actor who starred in the hit movie "Roundabout," will remain at Channel 4, the network that first brought him to prominence.

Barry, who first appeared on television in the role of "The Young and the Restless," has been with Channel 4 for the past three years. His success on the network led to a role in the hit movie "Roundabout," which has earned him critical acclaim and a nomination for an Emmy Award.

Barry's agent, Morris Unterberg, confirmed that the actor and his management team have been in discussions with Channel 4 about his future on the network.

"We're all very excited about Barry's continued success on Channel 4," Unterberg said. "He's one of the most talented young actors in the business, and we're thrilled to have him as part of our team."
It’s Not Fair Making People Feel Dishonest

Andy Rooney

It seems to me that the time has come to ask ourselves a very simple question: What is the point of the universe? And what do we mean by the word "dishonest"? Is it to suggest that we are all equally guilty of lying? Or is it to suggest that we are all equally innocent of the truth? I believe that the answer to both questions is yes, but let me explain why I think so.

On one hand, it is true that we all lie from time to time. We may do so to protect our interests, or to avoid embarrassment, or simply because we are human beings who are often unable to resist the temptation to stretch the truth. But this does not mean that we are all dishonest by nature. On the other hand, it is also true that there are many people who are consistently honest, and who are willing to tell the truth even when it is difficult or unpopular. These are the people who are truly honest, and who deserve our respect and admiration.

So let us be honest: we are all capable of both honesty and dishonesty. The question is whether we choose to be honest, or to be dishonest. And I believe that the answer to that question is up to us. It is up to us to choose to be honest, or to be dishonest, and it is up to us to take responsibility for our choices. For if we are not honest, then we are no longer free, and we are no longer truly alive.

Grads In Liberal Arts Start Slow

By Fredric McDarrah

When I graduated from college, I was a typical liberal arts major. I had studied philosophy, psychology, and sociology, and I had taken courses in literature, history, and art. But when I started working, I realized that I had no real skills, and I felt like I was lost. I thought that I would have to go back to school and get a degree in something practical, like business or engineering.

But then I met a group of people who were also liberal arts majors, and they showed me that it was possible to make a living with a liberal arts degree. They had found jobs in fields like publishing, advertising, and public relations, and they were able to use their skills to be successful. And today, I see that they were right: liberal arts graduates can indeed make a living, and they can do so in a variety of fields.

Energy-Saving Gets Architects’ Attention

By Paul Goldberger

Architecture is often thought of as a purely aesthetic endeavor, focused on creating beautiful buildings that are visually striking. But in recent years, architects have realized that there is more to architecture than just beauty. They have begun to focus on creating buildings that are efficient, both in terms of energy usage and in terms of cost.

The New York Times is pleased to announce the launch of an energy-saving program for architects. This program will provide architects with the tools and resources they need to design buildings that are both beautiful and energy-efficient. We encourage all architects to participate in this program, and to help create a more sustainable future for our planet.
