Cupid Comes To Prison

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) - Following the announcement that Oklahoma City was under martial law, a police officer was arrested for assault and battery.

The officer was charged with assault and battery for allegedly beating a man who refused to obey a curfew order.

Police said the officer used a nightstick to strike the man, who was later arrested for resisting arrest.

The incident occurred near a group of people who were protesting against the martial law.

Would-Be Hijacker Foiled By Change In Door

SEATTLE (AP) - A would-be hijacker looking for a funds transfer could only dream of the door from which he fled the airport, a controller said.

The door was not used for use by passengers, and the 30-year-old man who had wanted to change the name of an account at a bank, was caught by police.

The man, who had no identification, fled onto the tarmac and into the airport terminal after the flight from Los Angeles to Seattle was delayed.

He was later named as Richard V. Smith, a 30-year-old man who had never flown before.

He said he was looking for a way to change his name on his account at a bank, and was frustrated when his attempt to change it online was refused.

The man was later arrested and charged with theft.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - The twin siblings of Mount St. Helens, both of which are active, are expected to erupt in the coming days.

The siblings, 3410 and 3411, are located within the Toutle Volcanic Field.

The U.S. Geological Survey said both volcanoes are currently in a "deflationary" phase, which means the ground is sinking.

This is due to the loss of gases and magma from the volcanoes.

The report found that the trucker had been working for 14 hours straight.

In another report, a trucker was found dead inside his truck in a river.

Landry Anxiously Awaits 1980 Season

By TERRY WALKERI'm not going to make you work up that song about Landry and his wait for the season. I'm not going to make you start humming the chorus. But you can hear what it says, can't you? "You can be sure there ain't no way you can get me down..."

The statement said that maybe there's just a little bit of truth to the song for former LSU head football coach Andy Landry, who is now the head coach of the New Orleans Saints. Landry has been out of football for a year, and he's anxious to get back to the game he loves. But he's also aware of the challenges that come with being a head coach in the NFL. "I'm not sure if the opportunity is as good as it was at LSU," Landry said. "But I'm excited about the opportunity to work with the Saints. It's a new challenge every year, and that's what I love about football. We have a lot of people who are interested in covering our team."

Martinez, Bystrom Hurl 89ers To Sweep Of Indy

By JOHN MARTINOKLAHOMA CITY — Marty Martinez and Mike Bystrom are the second- and third-highest ranked pitchers in the country. And they're both on the mound Friday night for the Oklahoma City 89ers, who are playing the Indianapolis Indians in the first of a four-game series at the Fraternal Order of Eagles Stadium.

Martinez, a right-hander, is 11-3 with a 2.50 ERA this season. He has struck out 139 batters in 135 innings. Bystrom, a left-hander, is 12-2 with a 2.75 ERA. He has struck out 140 batters in 130 innings.

"We're both excited about this series," Martinez said. "We both want to help the team win. We both want to make sure we're at our best. We both want to make sure we're ready for the challenge."

WASHINGTON - West Germany (UPI) - Allied forces today released over 30 hostages from a hijacked airliner from Kuala Lumpur to West Germany that had been held for over a month.

The hostages, released by the hijackers in exchange for the release of their own children, were flown from Kuala Lumpur to Hong Kong, where they were handed over to the German authorities.

The hijackers, who are reportedly members of a militant group, had been demanding the release of their children held in German prisons.

Hungry Actors Still Can Say No

By Sarah Thompson

"Actors have always been more jobbers than actors," says John Hackett. "They don't say no. They're a disaster." Hackett, who is currently starring in "The Best of Everything," is one of the few actors who can say no. "I don't mean I've never done a movie," he says, "but I've always done what I want to do." Hackett, who is a graduate of Juilliard, has been in the business for over 20 years. "I've been in movies, on TV, on stage," he says. "I've done it all." Hackett's no-nonsense attitude is something that distinguishes him from the rest of the actors. "I don't want to do a movie just to get paid," he says. "I want to do something I believe in." Hackett's latest project, "The Best of Everything," is a perfect example of this. "I was offered the role," he says, "but I didn't want to do it. I wanted to do something else." Hackett's dedication to his craft is something that sets him apart from the rest of the actors. "I don't care about the money," he says. "I care about the art." Hackett's no-nonsense attitude is something that distinguishes him from the rest of the actors.
Celebrity Interest In Causes Help Them Go

By Ruth Thompson

Our question for the day: What do you do if you're a celebrity in Hollywood and you're not famous nor a philanthropist, but do you fail public attention and financial support for a charity or cause you care about?

Our answer: Just set a garden party or kick off a movie campaign! It's what many celebrities do these days. The two-part answer: In England you might try inviting a member of the Royal Family to the party or charity, while in Hollywood you might try getting a movie made about it. For example, if you want to support the work of an organization like the Special Olympics, you could make a movie about it. The movie could be called "The Olympian" or "Dancing Under the Starry Night". You could also use your celebrity to help promote the cause through interviews, social media, and public appearances. And if you really want to make a difference, you could even make a donation yourself.

The takeaway: It's all about the attention and support you can bring to the cause. And remember, the more people who know about the cause, the more money and resources can be raised to help those in need.

CAMPAIGN '80

By Jim Dickerson

At the close of every campaign speech, which is to say about 1:00 p.m. in the last year and a half, Ronald Reagan has an annoying habit of asking his audience how many of them are at home, and then coolly tells his audience: "I believe that the best way to solve our problems is to simple to get government off the backs of the American people and allow them in the working of the best marketplace to do what they do best, on their farms, in the factories, in their shops and stores... I would like to do that for more than anything else in the world."

As the 1980 Republican Presidenti cal candidate, Reagan may get the chance to do just that. In those few moments, when the chance has occurred for Ronald Wilson Reagan — and the view of many politicians, including some Republicans, who believe that he carries a number of major liabilities over to the general electorate.

There are:
1. a too narrow conservative political base, his age (he'll be 70 next February 11), and the perception that he is a Hollywood creation who is something of an intellectual void (he had some experience in Washington or with foreign affairs and should learn from the experience)

Reagan argues that, quite the contr are the country has basically shifted rightwards in his view. "I hear the Democrats talking about balancing the budget, cutting the growth of the bureaucracy and government spending, and that I think I've written their speeches for them." He economic theories or any sermon on political philosophy," he says. "We need two free words — family, neighborhood, freedom and equality."

It is enlightenment to know that anyone would consider him a right-wing indul gent. Nearly half of those who don't like America's enemies, believe that a rise in the cost of living is a major liability to the general electorate.

Ronald Reagan's Quest for the White House

Reagan is convinced that his philosophy of conservative economics and less government interference will win him the Presidency.

Reagan has been the leading spokesman for conserv atives in the Republican Party. His excellent conservative credentials are a year in a row, and he will appeal to those who believe that the country needs to get back to the basics.

There is no need to look any further than his four children, Paris, 27, right, and Maureen, 39, in New York. Reagan and wife Nancy (center) are joined by two of their children, Paris, 27, right, and Maureen, 39.

Where Reagan Stands on the Issues

Economy: Reagan cut personal income taxes 30 percent in his first three years, funds a Ceteris Presidential reorganization to balance the budget, and has a 6 percent or higher unemployment rate. He proposes an across-the-board tax cut of 25 percent, with smaller cuts for low-income families. He does not advocate for a balanced budget constitutional amendment, but he does support reducing the federal deficit.

Energy: Reagan supports nuclear energy projects, such as the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. He also supports increased exploration for new energy sources, such as offshore oil drilling.

Foreign Policy: Reagan supports U.S. involvement in Central America, including military intervention in Nicaragua. He also supports increased aid to Israel and the Middle East peace process.

Defense: Reagan is committed to maintaining a strong military, including a nuclear arms buildup. He supports increased defense spending and a strong U.S. presence in international military alliances.

Social Issues: Reagan is a conservative on social issues, supporting traditional values and opposing abortion. He also opposes increased funding for social programs, such as Medicare and Medicaid.

Reagan's approach to government is characterized by fiscal conservatism and a strong commitment to national security. He is known for his ability to mobilize public support and his effective use of the media to advance his agenda. Despite his political challenges, Reagan has been successful in implementing his agenda and has left a lasting legacy on American politics.
The Enduring Wit of American Presidents

By Joey Adams

Every President of the United States has had his own special brand of humor. My all-time favorite White House was through the years housing the wit of Harry S. Truman and Lyndon B. Johnson.

Harry always told the same joke at every political campaign stop. It went something like this: "If I was a chicken, and I was going to be raised in a dark place, I would choose to live in a chicken coop."

My favorite J. F. Kennedy campaign story was about a fellow who was trying to make speeches. He said he felt like the fellow who was on the funeral of his wife, and the undertaker had asked him if he would like to know what ceremonies were going to be performed in the cemetery with his mother-in-law. He said, "No, I can't do it, but it's just going to spill the whole time for me." Kennedy's sense of humor was an integral part of his reputation. The American public was aware of it from the moment he took office. When he was criticized for appearing to be tough on Bob Hope in Attorney General practically out of awe, he said, "I'm nothing without you."

My favorite story about L. B. J. is about a group of friends who went to a barbecue in his ranch. "I got 3,000 heads of cattle," he bragged. His neighbor interjected, "He, President, I don't want you to scare them down — but that's Texas! Every rancher in Texas has at least 5,000 head of cattle."

These are just a few of the humorous stories about some other American presidents.

George Washington: (In a letter to his wife, Martha) "You have mortification, the rugged back of Caesar for the soft, pleasant bed of Venus."

Thomas Jefferson: "Peace blue when you do not want it because it is cheap; it will sooner pay than you."}

Abraham Lincoln: "Public discussion is the best way to destroy slavery. When it hits a stump, it is the public's gavel itself."

Ulysses S. Grant: (General Grant was attempting to ride one of his stallions, and was a member of the staff. The other officers wondered, using that the general would not make much progress in his campaign.) "So has that much trouble to ride it all of its own."
Limited edition, hand-signed print by award-winning artist.

KEN MICHAELS is a one of today's most talked-about wildlife artists. And judging by the response of avid animal collectors, few artists have received higher acclaim. Most recently, Michaels was honored with America's prestigious Duck Stamp award. This is the first time in the history of the post office's 35-year-old Duck Stamp program that the winning artist and the 1979-80 stamp artwork have been chosen by the United States Government.

"Autumn Wings" is Michaels at the height of his power. It portrays America's most colorful game bird, the woodcock, in a perfect representation of nature's beauty and wonder. This print is limited to the size of the native world—perfect to the dimensions of the forests. Even further, each beautiful drawing of the woodcock is superbly hand-colored, true to the thunder of wingshooting. And every other element of woodcock is so real it's hard to believe. Even the poky, straggly, spindly-looking tail feathers fail to impress. It's so real that every woodcock fan is going to want a print of "Autumn Wings"—a new and original work, created solely for issue in a single, limited edition. It will be issued exclusively by The Franklin Gallery—available only by direct application to you. This, of course, is not a limited edition—this special edition will be personally signed and the price will be based upon how many collectors have requested the work. "Autumn Wings" will be the double-ended certificate, a red and white, and will be hand-numbered and individually signed by the artist. It will then be hand-numbered and individually signed. Each piece will be hand-numbered and individually signed by the artist. It will then be hand-numbered and individually signed. Each piece will be hand-numbered and individually signed by the artist. Magazine Offers LIFETIME Subscriptions for Just $7.95

NEW YORK—Better Living, the nation's leading service monthly devoted to cancer prevention, has added a new service offering to its line of products—lifetime subscriptions for just $7.95 a month. “This offer has been made possible,” Better Living’s spokesman said, “by today's astronomical interest rates.”

The interest rates on government-owned savings institutions have increased to such a point that it is profitable to sell lifetime subscriptions, he added. “We are able to offer these subscriptions at such a low price because of our firm policy of keeping our subscriptions as low as possible.”

“Consistent with our policy of providing our subscribers with the best possible products, we have modernized Better Living Magazine, our exclusive lifetime subscription gift. This is an innovative step which we are sure our subscribers will appreciate.”

“Let’s use this opportunity to upgrade our magazine and offer you a better service.”

Readers who wish to move up to this new level of service may do so at the current time. Only subscribers who take advantage of this offer will be able to enjoy the upgraded service.

“Don’t wait!” the spokesman urged. “We don’t know how long this will be possible. The lifetime service is limited to a certain number of subscribers. It depends on how long our interest rates remain high. Our subscribers may want to take advantage of this offer before it expires.”

“Don’t miss out on this opportunity!”

Headaches: The Kinds, The Causes, The Cures

By Brie Quinby

Virtually everyone has experienced headache pain at some point in their life. Eighty percent of the population get at least one headache a year.

The physical cause for headaches is probably the same in every case, but the psychological origin is different. Most people think that someone else is causing their headaches.

The most frequent type of vascular headaches is the common migraine.

The migraine is a type of aura — flashing lights or uncolored spots before your eyes. As the aura subsides, throbbing headaches that may last for several hours or days may follow. Common symptoms include many of the same symptoms, such as the visual disturbances.

A new kind of behavior headache is the cluster headache, which affects tens of thousands of people each year. These headaches may occur as often as four or five times a day for several weeks or months. The pain, which is punctuating, occurs on one side of the head, and often wakes the patient in the sleep time on that side.

Headache Treatment Options

Treatments vary widely. For psychological headaches, the most valuable drugs are pain relieving, tranquilizing drugs, depending on the severity of the headache. Since the pain is psychological in origin, the medication will also act on the mind. This will deal with the primary headache and deal with the psychological factors.

For intercurrent migraines, the drugs are a range of drugs such as ergotamine, to prevent the headache from spreading. In cases where headaches cannot be controlled by medications, a physical cause must be found to keep them from starting.

Another form of therapy is that being used successfully for migraine headaches is biofeedback. In which patients learn to use controlled concentration to control the flow of blood in their head, which in turn controls the flow of blood through their body, migraine patients may find relief.

Organize Yourself – and Save Time and Money

By Samuel J. Gullino

When you are home, when you get mar-ried and when you die, official documents record the event. And in-between these momentous occasions, hundreds upon hundreds of pages rec-terland your life – almost on a daily basis. What should be saved and where? What should be discard? How does a family organize itself for efficient, money-saving, record-keeping? Every family should have a system of record-keeping – and with a little organization – it’s easy to control the ever-growing flood of paper records.

Safe-Deposit Box

The vital files for a safe-deposit box at your bank, savings and loan association is at most only a few dollars per year. Your safe-deposit box should be cleverly designed to accommodate first aid, important, replaceable or costly and difficult to replace. Such items include: birth certificates, bank, securities, marriage license, divorce papers, school, card and credit agreements, citizenship papers, death certificates, adoption papers, deeds, mortgage papers, important contracts, automobile titles, copyrights and any other document recorded by the Government or the courts.

CANCELED CHECKS

Saving all your canceled checks for years is, in most cases, unnecessary. Utility bills and charge-account statements show the current balance owed. It is true, however, that indexing past-takes are sometimes made. A good rule of thumb, therefore, is to save all canceled checks for a year and then destroy those of those that are needed for proof of payment and future reference.

Net-Worth Statement

Each family should fill out a "net-worth statement" as a part of their financial planning. The statement should include all assets regardless of how long you have held them. Some items, although expensive, are normally:

- New Complete cleans and polishes

wood tables

plastic planters

chrome lamps

vinyl sofas

Complete for all furniture

All you need for all your furniture.

New Complete cleans and polishes...

- dowel file folders stored inside. Small ones are usually available for around 5 to $7. A lot of all items in your safe-deposit box should be made one to two years before you die.

- A kitchen bulletin board and calendar – posted with upcoming events, appointments, social obligations and shopping lists – is an invaluable aid to efficiency. They are not expensive and can be purchased in coordinated, coordinating and matching colors.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELoise:

I find that humorous is it when people ask me for my opinions on certain subjects. I have been known to express my views on various matters, but I am always careful to give an honest and sincere reaction. However, I sometimes wonder whether my opinions are appreciated or taken into consideration. It seems that people often seek my advice or feedback on topics that are not necessarily related to my expertise. I believe that sharing my thoughts can be valuable, especially when it comes to discussing matters of interest or relevance. Nevertheless, I am always open to listening and understanding different perspectives. It's a reminder that opinions are subjective and can vary from person to person. I appreciate the opportunity to engage in conversations, but I also recognize the importance of having an open mind and being receptive to diverse viewpoints. Thank you for this platform to express my musings.

Sincerely,

WATER TO THE RESCUE

DEAR HELoise:

I was wondering if you could help me with a science project. I need to demonstrate the importance of water conservation. Could you provide me with some interesting facts or experiments related to water efficiency and awareness? I would greatly appreciate your assistance in making my project informative and engaging. I'm looking forward to your response.

Sincerely,

[Name]

DEAR [Name]:

I'm happy to assist you with your science project on water conservation. Here are some interesting facts and experiments you might find useful:

1. Facts about Water Conservation: Did you know that water is a precious resource? According to the United Nations, the average person needs about 2.5 liters of water per day for basic survival. However, in some parts of the world, access to clean water is limited, and people must travel long distances to find it. By conserving water, we can help ensure a sustainable future for all.

2. Experiments on Water Efficiency: You can conduct simple experiments to demonstrate the importance of water conservation. For example, you can fill a bucket with water and observe how quickly it evaporates. This experiment can help illustrate the need for water conservation in arid regions. You can also compare the amount of water used in different household tasks, such as washing clothes or dishes, and see how much water can be saved by using efficient methods.

I hope these ideas inspire you to create an engaging and informative project. Good luck with your research!

Sincerely,
