Detroit (UPI) — Ronald Reagan received the endorsement of the American Republican Party today, and pledged to "vote no," in his presidential campaign address to reporters in Detroit. The endorsement was the first such endorsement of a candidate by a major party which Reagan has sought.

"I consider the administration's record to be outstanding," Reagan said. "I believe that under the leadership of the White House, we have accomplished many things that were previously unattainable."

He also noted that he was the only candidate who had fought for peace and a strong defense. "I believe that the defense of this country is the most important issue in this election," he said. "We cannot afford to be divided on defense."

The endorsement was given by the American Republican Party, which is based in southern California. The party has a national membership of about 100,000 and is one of the largest third parties in the country.

Reagan’s campaign manager, James Baker, said that the endorsement was a "strong endorsement" and that it would help the campaign in its efforts to win the presidency.

Baker also thanked the American Republican Party for its support and said that the party would play an important role in the campaign’s efforts to reach out to the Hispanic community.

The endorsement came as Reagan continued to campaign in the Western states, where he is expected to face strong opposition from the Democratic candidates.

Reagan has been campaigning in the Western states, where he is expected to face strong opposition from the Democratic candidates. He has been focusing on issues such as defense, the economy, and foreign policy.

The endorsement comes amid increasing pressure on Reagan to make a decision on his own future, as the deadline for the primaries approaches.

Reagan has been struggling to keep his campaign alive, and has been criticized for his lack of focus and his inability to connect with voters.

However, the endorsement from the American Republican Party is seen as a boost for Reagan, who has been trying to build momentum in the campaign.

The endorsement also comes as the Republican party is facing a challenge from the Tea Party movement, which has been calling for a more conservative candidate to challenge Obama.

Reagan has been trying to distance himself from the Tea Party, but the endorsement from the American Republican Party is seen as a sign that he is moving in that direction.

Peanut Butter Goes With Everything

DEAR HELoise: I ask a simple question. How can I use peanut butter in different recipes? It's a versatile ingredient, but I'm not sure how to incorporate it into my cooking.

HELoise: Peanut butter goes with almost anything. You can use it in salads, sandwiches, sauces, and even as a spread on toast or crackers. It's a great way to add flavor and texture to your meals. You can also use it as a substitute for butter in baking recipes.

WKY removes second Top deepay from the air

By Gene Trimper

WKY has bitten the dust no program manager Brian Spigler favorably with shows that do not completely fit into the station's format. Spigler, however, has been a much more flexible choice for WKY.

Monday will mark the second time in three weeks that WKY has not broadcast a local show. The station's format, which is closer to the national market, has been a bit off in recent weeks.

Monday's second show was to be the WKY News, a daily newscast that has been a fixture on the station since its founding. The show, however, was not broadcast due to technical difficulties.

The station has been trying to improve its ratings, which have been slipping over the past few months. Spigler, who was brought in from a similar market, is expected to make some changes to the station's format.

"We're trying to be more competitive with our local shows," Spigler said. "WKY is not just a radio station, it's a community. We need to be sure that we're giving our listeners what they want."
Nobody knows who Named the Oscar

By Dick Klein

DEAR DICK: Will you please once more tell us where the Oscar got his name? I know, but when I told my children they refused to believe me. My sister, who watches "Heavenly Dog" on the NBC-TV network, referred me also to your Christmas story about the Greek god from the movie "Oklahoma." Thank you for your help in the matter.

There is no real agreement about how or when the Oscar was named. The son story you refer to, about someone saying, "That little movie looks like my Uncle Oscar," has never been substantiated. The name "Oscar" certainly has been misused, including one that even to little Davies with dream up the name, but none of them is universally accepted.

DEAR DICK: My husband and I were interested about this for a month, so please settle it. We have a 1910 doll on it who played Carr in another film. Her name is Belle. I thought it was Shelley Winters, but I say it wasn't. She is a very nice lady. You won, you rich lady, you. It was Fugger's, whose real name was Marie Fugger, in 1711. He was born in 1651 or 1652, depending both on what reference work you believe. I do not know of any biography of Marie Fugger in that style. He was born in either 1711 or 1712, depending on what reference work you believe. I do not know of any biography of Marie Fugger in that style.

DEAR DICK: Could you please get me a Willem van der Weel "They Never Saw a Man Like Me, Sonliner." I say it was but my father says he wasn't. There is a large lot riding on this one. PAM MA WEL, P. Z. Thomas through R., Va., if you come. We've been playing the movie "The Adoption Way." Are you involved.

DEAR DICK: I am wondering if Tony Dana was married. Some people say he is and others say he's not. BRIUH M. MAYS, Anubus, Va. He wasn't married, but he was married and he has a 60-year-old son by his marriage.
Magic Pan
More than crepes

Magic Pan at 16 Penn Place, known for its outstanding crepes, has added an extra touch to its menu. The French restaurant also now offers a French watering hole with some new crepe items, including pastries and desserts.

A variety of sandwiches and salads are now available. Two favorites are the Monte Cristo sandwich and the beef and mushroom sandwich. The staff, which still finds the Magic Pan's famous crepe creation, has expanded its menu with the addition of a new crepe item - the strawberry and whipped cream dessert crepe. More than 1600 of the crepes were sold in one week, as visitors to the Arts Festival last weekend.

Other crepes feature beef, chicken, fish, vegetables, fruit, and other sweet or savory fillings. Manager Phil Pull and his all-Oklahoma management crew maintain the atmosphere of a French Country Inn at this popular restaurant.

Panovs: beauty and resilience

NEW YORK (U.S.A.) — If ever art testifies to the cruelty of the Cold War, it is Panov's beauty and resilience. They are beautiful people; not in sensation of naufrage, in the sense of the opposite of la mode, but in that of the elegant, in that of the core-thought of the world.

It is in an ironic sense that the Americas are still the Americas, and Americans are still Americans, not only in a political or economic sense, but in a psychological and moral sense. This is the essence of the beauty of Panov's art. It is in the ability to love not because of the opposite of la mode, but because of the opposite of naissance.

'Chicago' bounces back with 14th album

By Kurt Loder

DAYTON, Ohio — Chicago Transit Authority, the 14th studio album of the group that knocked on the door of rock and roll and never crossed it, has been released.

Pankow, obviously excited by the news, said the album will be released in 12th, which is the same day as the 13th album.

"Chicago" is a little different from the previous albums, he said. The group's music has matured and become more sophisticated.

"We've been waiting for this album," Pankow said. "It's been a long time coming."
A reform for John Saxon?

My Door Keeper

I have been a great admirer of John Saxon, our American actor, who has recently been in Europe playing in some very interesting films. His performance in "The Hooker Convention" was particularly impressive. However, I have noticed a trend in recent years where certain films have been classified as "exploitation films." This trend seems to have gained momentum in some countries, such as Italy and the United States.

Saxon has been involved in a few "exploitation films" recently, which have been criticized for their explicit content. I believe that this trend is problematic because it can alienate many audiences who are not interested in such content. I hope that Saxon will continue to choose roles that allow him to showcase his talent and avoid stereotypical roles.

DALLAS - While some of the members of the press were searching for the latest scoop about John Saxon, his latest film, "Chock and Cheong's Next Movie," a small, dart-shaped man was heard to say, "I wonder if this is going to be one of the back shots, watching the backs of the actors, or if the actors were actually being shot from behind." This statement was made in the director's office, where the crew was preparing for the next scene.

"Over there," he continued, "the sets are still being built in pieces like Japan and West Germany, where the people live four months a year. And in the United States, there's the '80s, which is a much more realistic time frame. I think it was the director's intention to show the characters in a realistic way." The statement was made as the director walked through the set, showing the crew around the new location.

"It was probably the greatest reaction in any film," he went on. "Every moment was a moment that was right. That was the key to the film. But it was more than that. It was something that was very personal." The director smiled as he continued, "I think the story was right. And the actors were right. And the whole thing was right."
