DEPOSED SHAH DIES

By W. G. Klevier

United Press International

The former shah of Iran, Beshir Ali Reza Pahlavi, died in his Yalta, a small hotel in the French Riviera, on January 13, 1980. He was 81 years old.

The shah died at 11:30 a.m. local time at his home in the French Riviera town of Sainte-Maxime, near Nice.

The cause of death was not immediately released. The French police said the shah died of natural causes.

The shah had retired to the French Riviera in 1979 after he was forced to leave Iran by the revolution that brought about the rule of Ayatollah Khomeini.

The shah's death comes as a surprise to many Iranians, who had hoped that he would return to Iran to take part in the country's political process.

The shah was the last of the Pahlavi dynasty, which ruled Iran from 1925 to 1979. He was succeeded by his son, Crown Prince Ali Reza.

The news of the shah's death was confirmed by his son, Crown Prince Ali Reza, who said his father had died peacefully in his sleep.

The shah was a controversial figure in Iran, with many Iranians feeling he had not done enough to protect their country from external threats.

But many Iranians also admired his leadership and the legacy he left to the country.

The shah's death is expected to have a major impact on Iran's political landscape, with many people now looking to his son, Crown Prince Ali Reza, to take over as the country's leader.

The shah is survived by his son, Crown Prince Ali Reza, and four daughters.

Marine Corps

A Marine killed by a roadside bomb in Afghanistan was a decorated veteran of the Vietnam War, the military said.

The Marine, who was identified as Cpl. John Johnson, was killed on February 2, 2002, while on patrol in Afghanistan.

Johnson was a member of the 1st Marine Division and had served several tours of duty in the Vietnam War.

The Marine Corps has confirmed that Johnson was the first American Marine to be killed in action in Afghanistan.

Johnson's death comes after the United States sent its largest ever contingent of forces to Afghanistan last month.

The United States has been engaged in a war against the Taliban since 2001, and the US-led forces have been battling the Taliban for control of the country.

The news of Johnson's death is expected to have a major impact on the war in Afghanistan, with many people now looking to the US-led forces to take over as the country's leader.

Johnson is survived by his wife and two children.

A man who had been missing for months was found dead in a northeastern Pennsylvania forest, police said.

The body of the man, identified as Richard Johnson, was discovered in a forest near the town of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, police said.

Johnson had been reported missing in November, and the search for him became increasingly difficult as the weather turned colder.

Johnson was last seen in the area near the St. Johnsbury town dump, police said.

The police have asked anyone with information about Johnson's disappearance to call them.

The search for Johnson is expected to have a major impact on the local community, with many people now looking to the police to take over as the town's leader.

Johnson is survived by his family and friends.

Billy’s Libyan Connections Probed By Senate

WASHINGTON — Billy Carter, the president’s brother, is being investigated by the Senate Select Intelligence Committee for possible contacts with Libyan agents, sources said yesterday. The committee has been gathering information on Carter’s suspected ties with Libya since last fall, when some of his foreign travels were reported.

Carter is under scrutiny by the committee, which has been examining whether he has engaged in activities that could be considered inappropriate under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. The act prohibits U.S. citizens from engaging in foreign activities that might be interpreted as benefiting a foreign government.

According to sources familiar with the committee’s activities, the Senate investigation has focused on Carter’s activities in Libya and other countries. The committee has been investigating whether Carter’s foreign travels were funded by Libyan agents or whether he engaged in activities that might benefit Libya.

The committee has also been examining Carter’s activities in other countries, including Syria, Yemen, and Iran.

Carter has long been a figure of interest to the committee, which has been investigating allegations of improper behavior by members of the Carter family. The committee has been examining whether Carter has engaged in activities that could be considered inappropriate under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

The committee’s investigation is ongoing, and no formal charges have been filed against Carter.

Elderly Will Increase

WASHINGTON — The elderly population in the U.S. is expected to increase significantly in the coming decades, according to a new report by the Census Bureau. The report predicts that the number of Americans 65 and older will grow from 45 million in 2019 to 80 million by 2050.

The report, released yesterday, is based on projections that take into account changes in birth rates, death rates, and migration patterns. The report predicts that the elderly population will grow at a faster rate than the overall population, with the proportion of people 65 and older rising from 12.5% in 2019 to 20% by 2050.

The report notes that the elderly population is growing fastest among people 85 and older, with the number of people in this age group expected to increase from 6 million in 2019 to 21 million by 2050.

The report also predicts that the elderly population will be more diverse in the future, with an increase in the number of people of color living in old age.

Billy Provides A New Sport

WASHINGTON — Billy Carter, the president’s brother, has introduced a new sport to the world. The sport, called Billyball, is a fast-paced, action-packed game that combines elements of baseball, football, and basketball.

Carter said he came up with the idea for Billyball after watching a game of football and noting the similarities between the two sports. He said he then decided to combine the two sports to create a new, exciting game.

Billyball is played with a standard baseball glove, a football and a basketball. The game is played on a field that is similar to a football field, with players running up and down the field trying to score points.

Carter said he is excited about the new sport and believes it will be popular with people of all ages.

Once Loved By His People, Reza Pahlavi Dies In Exile In Egypt

By United Press International

On Dec. 1, 1979, thousands of people poured into streets of Tehran, chanting and waving flowers, to see their long lost king. They had just heard that the Shah was coming back to Iran.

But little did they know that they were about to witness a stunning reversal of fortune. The Shah, who had been living in exile since the revolution of 1979, was returning to his homeland, at least for a short while.

The Shah was known for his lavish lifestyle and his close ties to the United States. He had been in power for 26 years before he was toppled by a popular uprising.

The Shah's return was a source of hope and frustration for many Iranians. Some saw it as a sign that the times were changing in the Middle East, while others feared that the Shah's return would lead to a resurgence of his old regime.

The Shah died in exile in Egypt in 1980. His legacy remains a complex one, with many Iranians divided over whether he was a good or bad leader.
