CARTER SEES END TO CONTROVERSY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Saturday that his administration was seeing an end to the controversy over his brother Billy's relationship with Libya. Billy Carter, the president's brother, had been under investigation for his activities in Libya and possible violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

"I am pleased to announce," Carter said in a statement, "that the controversy over my brother's activities in Libya is coming to an end. After a thorough investigation, the Justice Department has determined that there is no basis for a prosecution.

"I want to thank the Justice Department for their diligent work," he added. "I believe that this will bring closure to this matter and allow us to move forward in the rest of our administration."

Childhood Cancer: Growing Hope For Survival

CHICAGO (AP) — While dozens of children with cancer are still receiving treatment in Chicago hospitals, some are enjoying a special treat: a visit from Chicago Bulls basketball player Scottie Pippen.

Pippen, who was treated for bone cancer as a child, visited the University of Chicago's Comer Children's Hospital on Friday to meet with patients and their families.

"I know how it feels to be in their shoes, and I want to show them that they can overcome this disease," Pippen said. "I want them to know that they're not alone, and that there's hope for their future.

In the past year, the Bulls have been a part of several children's hospital visits, including one in which Pippen played with children who were sick with cancer.

"It's great to see the kids light up when they see Scottie," said hospital spokesperson Jane Smith. "It really lifts their spirits and gives them the motivation to keep fighting."

Tangshan: Four Years Later

PEKING (China) - In 1976, a magnitude 7.8 earthquake struck the city of Tangshan, killing over 240,000 people. Four years later, the city is still rebuilding. The survivors are slowly returning to their homes, but the legacy of the disaster remains.

Blue skies and warm weather greeted the people of Tangshan on April 28, the anniversary of the quake. The earthquake, which occurred on April 28, 1976, was the worst quake in China's history. The city was reduced to rubble, and more than 240,000 people were killed.

A report by a Japanese aid team, which spent a month in Tangshan, showed that the city was still struggling to recover.

‘A great many of the survivors have never been to their old homes,’ the report said. ‘A great many of them have not seen their old buildings. They didn’t have much time to see them before they were lost.’

The Japanese aid team was led by Dr. T. Nakamura, a professor at the University of Tokyo.

The team had come to Tangshan to assess the situation and to provide aid to the survivors.

They found that the city was still in ruins, with many buildings still standing but in disrepair. The survivors were living in makeshift shelters, and the air was filled with the smell of dust and smoke.

‘The city is still recovering,’ Dr. Nakamura said. ‘The people are still suffering.’

The Japanese aid team recommended that international aid be increased to help the city recover.

‘We have been sending aid to Tangshan for the past few years,’ Dr. Nakamura said. ‘But we need more help.’

The earthquake, which measured 8.3 on the Richter scale, was felt over a wide area, and many other cities were affected.

The Japanese aid team said that the earthquake had caused great loss of life and property, and that the damage was still being assessed.

‘The damage is enormous,’ Dr. Nakamura said. ‘We need more help.’

The team said that the Japanese government had already sent aid to Tangshan, but that more help was needed.

‘The Japanese government has sent us aid,’ Dr. Nakamura said. ‘But we need more help.’
