ALLEN TORNADOES RAVAGE TEXAS

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) - Hurricane Allen, now a mere shadow of its former self, was causing heavy damage in Texas as it moved inland.

The second-eldest major of the season, Allen, which was downgraded to a tropical storm today, has dumped at least 20 inches of rain on parts of Texas.

Allen's remnants have already brought floodwaters to some areas, and the National Weather Service says the storm will continue to move into the Gulf of Mexico.

The storm's path has caused widespread flooding and power outages across the state.

daylong battle with the weather, Allen was once again a tropical storm, but its effects continue to be felt across the region.

Four large sailboats floundered on the beach at Corpus Christi Sunday after being blown ashore by Hurricane Allen.

The storm was still powerful enough to produce waves up to 20 feet in some areas. But, moving across the southern part of the state, Allen began to weaken as it moved over land.

The National Weather Service said the storm was expected to continue to move into the Gulf of Mexico on Monday and Tuesday.
Kennedy Gets Key Concessions

President Kennedy moved on Capitol Hill today to put a new twist on the civil rights bill in a bid to attract key Southern Democrats, who have blocked action on the measure. The new plan, which has been in the works for days, would make the bill more palatable to those Democrats by providing them with limited special provisions.

The move came despite the president's yesterday to the Negro leaders that he would not compromises and would hold a "wall." The president's change of heart was seen as a major victory for civil rights leaders who have been pressing him to do more.

The new plan includes a provision that would give Southern senators the right to filibuster the bill, as they have done in the past. It also includes a provision that would allow the Senate to override a presidential veto of the bill, which some senators have been afraid to do.

Florida's ERA Battleground

Gains Nationwide Attention

By William G. James, Washington

A battle over the Equal Rights Amendment has flared once again in Florida. The amendment, which is designed to ban discrimination based on gender, has been approved by the state legislature but is awaiting ratification by the state's Republican governor, who has vowed to veto it.

The governor's stance has put Florida on the front lines of the national debate over the amendment. A number of Republican candidates in key states have made the issue a cornerstone of their campaigns, and pollsters say the issue is one of the most closely watched in the country.

Police Chase Suspect

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 19 - A report that a suspect in the bombing of the Oklahoma City Federal Building was taken into custody on Monday in Oklahoma City, Okla., was false. The suspect, identified by the FBI as Timothy McVeigh, was reportedly arrested in Cashion, Okla., after a high-speed chase in a stolen car.

A police official said that McVeigh was taken into custody after a shootout with officers in Cashion. The official said that McVeigh had been involved in a series of bomb threats in the area and that the investigation had focused on him for several months.

Queen Sound Reproduced

By Anne Tramont

A new technology has been developed that allows sound to be reproduced without the use of a microphone. The technology, called "Queen Sound," was developed by a team of engineers at Queen University in California.

The system works by using the natural vibrations of the air to reproduce sound. It is said to be more efficient than traditional systems, which rely on microphones to capture and transmit sound.

Carter’s Minions Leave Nothing To Chance

NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter’s minions have nothing to lose. Their boss is a man who, despite having promised to clean up the White House, is himself more likely to put a clean sheet on his own bed. In his administration’s early months, the President’s aides have been happy to pander to the public’s desire for a cleaner, more open government.

It’s Fruitless To Explain Your Job

By Andy Rooney

We hear a lot about explaining your job, but it’s complicated. The problem is that people just don’t seem to understand what we do. If you explain it to them, they just look at you askew and say, "I don’t know what you mean." It’s like trying to explain the concept of "heaven" to a child. They just don’t get it.

What is heaven? It’s a place where everything is perfect. Where there’s no pain, no suffering, no death. Where people live forever. It’s a place where you can eat ice cream for breakfast, and it never goes bad. It’s a place where you can hang out with God. That’s what heaven is.

But how do you explain that to someone? You can’t just say, "Heaven is where you can eat ice cream for breakfast." They’ll look at you like you’re nuts.

So what do you do? You have to find a way to explain it that makes sense to them. You have to break it down into smaller, more manageable pieces.

For example, you can start by explaining what heaven means to you personally. You can say, "When I think of heaven, I think of a place where I can be with my loved ones for all eternity." That makes sense to most people.

Then you can explain what heaven means to others. You can say, "When I think of heaven, I think of a place where people can be happy and free of pain and suffering." That makes sense to everyone.

The key is to keep it simple. Don’t try to explain everything at once. Break it down into small, manageable pieces.

That’s how you explain your job. It’s not easy, but it’s worth it. People appreciate it when you’re willing to take the time to explain things.

Our world is full of mysteries. We don’t understand everything. But that’s okay. We’re human. We can’t know everything. The important thing is to keep trying. To keep explaining things.

It’s not a fruitless task. It’s a necessary one. And it’s a task worth doing.
Van Patten Rejects Acting

NEW YORK (UPI)—It's hard to believe, but 21-year-old Van Patten, the blond, blue-eyed actor-athlete who made his mark on television in the picture, "Hello, Dolly," is about to star in a new NBC-TV series. "It's a lot like being the first time around," he says. "I'm just as nervous as hell."

"I'm not going to be a star," he adds. "I'm just going to be another actor."

The young man, who has been on television for six years, says he is not interested in becoming a star. "I just want to act," he says. "I don't care if I'm a star or not."

He has been in several movies, including "The Untouchables," "Vertigo," and "The Killers," and has been nominated for an Oscar for his role in "The Sundowners." He is now appearing in "The Farmer's Daughter," which opens next month.

Van Patten says he is not interested in becoming a star because he is not interested in being rich. "I don't want to be rich," he says. "I just want to be happy."

Hijacker Arrested By Cubans

MIAMI (UPI) — A commercial pilot on a Miami-bound Cuban flight from Havana yesterday led an attempted hijacking at gunpoint.

The hijacker, identified as Carlos Valencia, a Cuban national, took control of the flight shortly after takeoff from Havana and ordered the pilot to fly the plane to Miami, according to airport officials.

Valencia, who was armed with a .38 caliber revolver, demanded that the pilot land the plane at the Miami International Airport. The pilot complied, and Valencia then released the pilot and surrendered to airport authorities.

Vivian's, a local Havana restaurant, was turned over to a law enforcement official.
