Carter Campaigner Quits; Denies Cocaine Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter’s Atlanta-based, White House-staffed national political campaign aide, former lawyer Charles Brown, said he was leaving the campaign to spend more time with his family.

“It’s not easy to leave a campaign that you’ve worked so hard for, but I feel it’s the right decision for me,” Brown said in a statement.

“I’ve been with Carter’s campaign since its inception and have seen it grow from a small operation to a national force. I’ve been fortunate to work with some incredible people and have learned a lot from them. I’m confident that the campaign will continue to be successful without me,” Brown said.

As for his future, Brown said he plans to spend more time with his family and consider other opportunities in the future. He said he would continue to support Carter and the campaign in any way he can.

The decision to leave the campaign was made after Brown and his family had a long conversation about his role in the campaign and what was best for him and his family.

Brown said he had no plans to join another campaign or run for office himself. He said he was looking forward to spending more time with his family and exploring other opportunities in the future.

“I’m grateful for the opportunity to have served on the Carter campaign and I wish the team all the best in the future,” Brown said.

The campaign said in a statement that it was “grateful” for Brown’s service and wished him all the best in the future.

CARTER CAMPAIGNER QUITS

Charles Brown, a former lawyer for former President Jimmy Carter, has announced he is leaving the campaign to spend more time with his family.

Brown, who served as the campaign’s national political director, said in a statement that he had decided to leave the campaign to pursue other opportunities.

“I have been with the campaign for the past several months and have enjoyed working on the campaign with Jimmy Carter,” Brown said in a statement.

“I have learned a great deal and have enjoyed meeting so many wonderful people. However, I have decided to pursue other opportunities at this time,” Brown said.

The campaign’s press secretary, Brandi Baker, said in a statement that the campaign was grateful for Brown’s service and wished him all the best.

“Charles is a talented and hardworking professional who has been an integral part of our team,” Baker said in a statement.

“He has played a key role in helping the campaign to communicate with the American people and has brought a wealth of experience and expertise to the team.

“On behalf of Jimmy Carter and the campaign, we wish Charles all the best in his future endeavors,” Baker said.

Zink, Nickles Are Opposites

One of the few things John Zink and Don Nickles have in common is that they are both candidates for the 4th District congressional seat.

Zink, a former mayor of Topeka, has already cast his vote in the primary, while Nickles, a former state senator, has not yet announced if he will vote.

"It's not unusual for candidates to hold their votes until the last minute," said Zink. "I'm confident that I'll have a strong showing in the primary, and I'm looking forward to facing Nickles in the general election."""
